Public to be more informed on study

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

Public frustration was the topic of a lengthy discussion at last Wednesday's meeting of the Steering Committee for Long Term Health Care Reform, says the committee chairperson.

"The feeling seems to be that we're not keeping people as informed as we should," Maureen Dikun says.

"I felt as chairperson we'd approached communication pretty well, but it seems there's a lot of non-communication... And that's why it's important to have Halibur-ton people on the committee," Dikun says, adding local residents keep the committee abreast of public sentiment.

To combat the problem, Dikun says the press will receive a progress report before the next meeting on August 21. After the meeting, any committee members who wish to stay can do so to answer questions about the committee's progress with members of the press. (The meetings themselves are closed to the press. A press conference is held after each meeting to discuss what occurred during the meeting.)

Dikun says this will enhance the Resort owners want more time to ponder sewer

by MARTHA PERKINS

Resorts and developers along the north shore of Lake Kashagawigamog want more time to decide if they can afford to hook up to the proposed sewer line extension.

On July 16, Dysart et al council gave the property owners 21 days to determine whether they can line up enough financial resources to pay for the extension. The August 6 deadline has passed and at a meeting last week, they wrote a letter to the municipality asking to have until September 15 to make the decision. The Ministry of the Environment our face is almost unbelievable." To make matter's worse, Ward says the decision must be made in the midst of the resorts' busiest season. And because tourism has been slow, owners must devote much time to making the most out of the summer season.

But it's the owners who have yet to develop their property who may face the toughest decision. Only existing buildings will be able to initially hook up. Owners who want to build using the line for sewage disposal have no guarantee they will ever be able to hook up.

Walter Thomas represents property owners who want to build a senior will pay 80 per cent of the $7-million cost of expanding the Haliburton sewage treatment plant and building a line out to resorts along the north shore of Lake Kashagawigamog to Deer Lodge. The resort and property owners who want to hook into the line have to pay part of the remaining costs.

At first, owners had hoped they could expand facilities to generate the revenue to pay for the hook-up. Last month, MOE officials said only existing units can be hooked up and a water quality impact study must show positive results before more units can be added.

"We're cautious," says Wigamog Inn owner Art Ward. "We don't want to kill the project. We're disappointed the MOE has put this new wrinkle in after seven years (of negotiations.) All of a sudden, to be thrown this (environmental study) in citizens' home on Highway 121. Because there is only one house on the property now, only that house will be able to hook up. If—and only if—the environmental study shows the lake can handle the extra effluent can the proposed nursing home hook into the line.

Yet the cost these owners are expected to pay for the extension is $250,000. That's a very expensive price for a glorified septic system for one house, if they are not allowed to develop the property.

"Money doesn't grow on the trees of Haliburton," Thomas noted.

Dysart reeve Bill Davis said he has heard about the September 15 request, but has yet to receive the letter. "I can't speak for all of council" whether the deadline will be extended. "I would have to look at the reason and discuss it with council."

The next Dysart council meeting is Monday.

It's off to the races for political organizers

Although there had been speculation for weeks that David Peterson would send Ontario to the polls this autumn, local campaigns are just beginning to organize and formulate battle plans for the six weeks leading to the vote.

"All three local parties anticipated an early call, but little could be done in advance of the nomination meetings," says David Gemmill, campaign whip for the Progressive Conservatives, pointing out that it is impossible to make signs or buttons without knowing who the candidate is.

Right now, the three parties are trying to assemble, or reassemble, volunteers and workers to mount the type of campaign necessary with such a big riding.

"Between elections, people disperse," says New Democratic campaign chairperson Ben Howlett. "But they're more willing to help when the election writ is called."

All three parties recently opened campaign headquarters in Lindsay, and will be meeting this week to determine overall strategy for August, and each seem to be at different stages of readiness.

"We've never had so much help," explains Howlett. The NDP was the first party to hold a nomination meeting, with Gooderham priest Dennis Drainville winning the acclamation of supporters. "Our

Echo is sponsoring an all-candidates debate

All three local candidates in the upcoming provincial election have committed themselves to a public debate in Haliburton Village.

Liberal Pat O'Reilly, New Democrat Dennis Drainville and Progressive Conservative Ron Jenkins have all agreed to take part in the debate and question and answer period.

The debate, tentatively scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the Dysart Community Centre on Monday, August 20, is being sponsored by The Echo.

The evening will begin with brief speeches by the candidates. The Echo will then ask about five questions, which all three will answer. Questions will then be opened up to the floor, with anyone in the audience able to ask a question. Candidates will close with a summation of their policies and promises.

Please watch for an advertisement in next week's Echo.

Tragedy marred this holiday weekend when car accidents on local highways claimed the lives of three men.

On Saturday morning, a few minutes after midnight, a 1980 Ford Mustang went out of control on Highway 35 just north of Carnarvon. The car was heading into a curve in the northbound lane when it crossed to southbound lane and rolled into the ditch, striking a hydro pole. The 18-year-old driver, Scott Gregory Robert of Ajax, was killed.

Michelle Devouge, 16 of Pickering was taken to Peterborough Civic Hospital. The hospital says she is no longer under their care, but was unable to confirm the conditions under which she was released, or whether she had been transferred to another hospital.

Two hours later, two men were killed in another accident on Highway 35, just south of Minden. A 1982 Toyota Tercel travelling southbound entered the northbound lane to collide with a 1989 Jeep Cherokee.

The driver of the Toyota, Murdoch Sutherland, 23 of Toronto, and passenger David Marche, 22 of Nova Scotia, were killed.

The occupants of the northbound vehicle—Kurt Graf, 57, Julia Graf, 53 and 9-year-old Christian Leib, all of Toronto—were taken to various Toronto hospitals. O.P.P. say all three were seriously injured.

Residents unite to fight closure of Norland P.O.

by LORRAYNE ANTHONY
Staff Reporter

No one can accuse the residents of Norland of apathy. They are angry over Canada Post's decision to close the Norland Post Office and they are going to do something about it.

About 70 residents attended the public meeting called by Dianne Austin. One of the speakers at the meeting, Lloyd Johnson, former president of the Canadian Postmasters and Assistants Association, told the group about Canada Post's five-year plan to shut down all rural post offices across Canada. Johnson encouraged the people of Norland to resist the decision.

Everyone at the meeting decided to make their opposition to Canada Post's plan known. Petitions are being circulated and letter writing campaigns are being initiated.

Canada Post is hosting a meeting at the Norland Recreation Centre on August 9 at 7 p.m. All concerned residents are urged to attend.

Motorcyclist isn't injured

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

An Echo reporter was prevented from reaching an accident on Monday afternoon when onlookers near the scene threatened her and kicked the Echo van.

Despite the presence of two police cars, two ambulances and the Dysart Fire Emergency Response Vehicle, the accident was not serious. Christopher Stolerak, the driver, received minor injuries when his motorcycle left the road. The accident occurred at 12:10 p.m. on South Shore Road, Haliburton Lake.

Minden OPP say they originally thought the accident was serious since Stolerak was unconscious when they arrived at the scene. After he awoke and seemed to be alright, they realized it was less serious. It has been classified as a Minor Personal Injury accident.

WHERE'S THE POND? Until Monday morning, this hole of mud at Lochaven Inn was filled with water. For some unknown reason, the water was sucked out of the pond and into nearby Maple Lake. It's never happened before.

With a gigantic swoosh, a pond simply disappears

by LORRAYNE ANTHONY
Staff Reporter

A disappearing pond was one of the attractions at Lochaven Inn nobody knew about — including the owners.

George Landsperger, the owner of Lochaven Inn on North Shore Road in Stanhope, had no idea what was happening when he looked out onto Maple Lake on Monday morning and saw a gush of water coming up from the lake. "It was a bubbling spurt in the middle of the lake."

There's a pond at Lochaven which is spring-fed, and water slowly trickles from the pond, via a small tunnel, into Maple Lake throughout the year. But something happened around 8 a.m. on August 6 which caused the small tunnel to expand, draining the entire pond in a matter of minutes.

"I was feeding bacon to the fish when I noticed a whirlpool in the far end of the pond. Then 10 minutes later the whole pond was sucked into a hole. The paddle boat got sucked down right along with it," said Mike Thomas, the Landspergers' son-in-law who was visiting from Brampton.

"I was puzzled by the bubbling in the lake, but then a few minutes later, Mike comes in and says the pond is gone. I didn't know what was happening," said Mr. Landsperger.

"We went down to the lake to find some frogs before breakfast and we saw lots of bubbling and spurts of water in the lake and then some of the ground caved in around the lake," said Adam Berholz, a young Lochaven guest.

Bob Gater, a conservation officer with the Ministry of Natural Resources, was called in to find out what happened to the pond.

"I've never had a call like this before. I've heard of lots of things going missing, but never a pond," said Mr. Gater.

The Ministry's main concern is the stability of the land. Some of the ground just adjacent to Maple Lake caved in over the tunnel. The problem is that the underground tunnel runs close to the Inn's septic tile bed.

"We've called the Ministry of Environment. We just want to make sure none of the seepage from the tile bed will end up in the lake," Mr. Gater said.

Some of the guests at the Inn were concerned about the wildlife in the pond.

"We saw some of the grass caving in and then in the pond we saw some little fishes flippin' around, so we put them in the lake," said guest Rudy Barell. His older brother, Roy, also tried to save some of the fish. "I scooped up a fish in my hands and took it to the lake. Also a bird was layin' on its back so we cleaned it off and set it down on the grass by the lake. I think it'll be okay now."

The MOE will investigate the disappearing pond this week. First Moss Pond disappears, then a car disappears into Drag River and now the Lochaven Inn pond disappears. What other waterbody mishap will occur in what is fast becoming the Haliburton Triangle?

Parties begin to whip up support organization is under control, and everything is ready to roll."

Being the incumbents, Liberal candidate Pat O'Reilly and others have already met with Premier David Peterson to highlight certain policy areas the party wants to stress.

"Tourism will continue the profile it has achieved," said Michael O'Reilly, campaign chairman and brother of the Liberal candidate. Farming, business and industry will also dominate the Liberal platform.

But Haliburtonians will not let the Liberals forget health care, already the hot local issue following the numerous delays regarding chronic-care facilities in the county.

Michael O'Reilly said the party's direction on this issue is contingent on the study currently underway examining Haliburton's long-range, health care needs.

"We hope the results (of the study) will be implemented," he time slots be filled, but speeches have to be written.

"You have to write speeches and policies to appeal to the popular vote," he says, noting that some have already been written.

O'Reilly also said this was the week for planning the overall schedule of the month.

"We're hoping to canvas door to door," he says.

But with such a big riding, many candidates will be venturing into areas for the first time.

"Nobody knows (O'Reilly) up here," explains Linda Salvatori, Liberal chairperson of the Haliburton riding association branch. "We have to get him up here as much as we can."

The local groups get help from the provincial party ranging from legal counsel to policy directives.

"We go by a tradition of following the party policy," says Howlett. But local issues remain the domain of the individual riding, but Howlett

'You have to write speeches and policies to appeal to the popular vote.'

said, adding that he hoped the study called for more than just the promised chronic care beds. "We'd like to see a comprehensive care package."

Currently, the Tories are organizing each polling district to ensure there are sufficient volunteers to accompany Jenkins on any walkabout, or to distribute campaign literature.

They, like the other parties, have begun planning their candidate's itinerary, right down to the night before the election.

"Everybody wants you," explains Gemmill. Difficulties inevitably arise that require organizations to prioritize the many functions and events necessary for the candidates to attend. "You have to make decisions because you can't be in two places at once."

Gemmill says the Tories have divided each day into three units for a total of 90 periods Jenkins will have available.

"We've filled about 35-40 parts," he says, adding that not only must says the Victoria-Haliburton NDPs are not at the policy level yet. He also said he hopes to draft a few MPPs from Toronto to help Drainville with his campaign. NDP leader Bob Rae spoke at Drainville's acclamation meeting.

All three campaigns have some sort of committee structure in place to handle anything from advertising and recruitment, to policy initiatives, and as with the NDPs, all are reporting strong volunteer turnout.

But fine tuning remains. In the next day or so the three parties will plan each day in detail to achieve the maximum bang for the candidates time, hoping to attend as many barbecues and social functions as possible.

"If it has a vote, it has an interest in how this province is run," explains Gemmill. "All candidates realize this, and all will have to ensure their message gets out to as many people as possible over the next six weeks."

PASSING THE SCEPTRE: Provincial Progressive Conservative candidate Ron Jenkins, left, gets vote support from Haliburton's Murray Fearrey, who ran for the PCs in 1985 but came second to retiring John Eakins.

Cities have to listen to Tory voice: Jenkins

by MICHAEL McHUGH
Staff Reporter

"Rural people are fed up with big city government," says the newly acclaimed Progressive Conservative candidate of Victoria-Haliburton, who hopes his rural roots will send him to Queen's Park.

Ron Jenkins, 44, of Little Britain, officially became the Tory's provincial hope at last Wednesday night's nomination convention at I.E. Weldon High School in Lindsay. He wasted little time striking a chord the provincial Tories will stress throughout the 6-week campaign leading to the September 6 vote.

"We can't afford the type of government that's been in power for the last five years," he said, reiterating points previously made by the evening's guest speaker, Simcoe East M.P.P. Al Maclean, about the level of taxation Ontarians have endured.

Coupled with the amount of broken promises the Liberals have made, including the 1986 promise retiring Liberal M.P.P. John Eakins made regarding the expansion of the existing sewer system, (the expansion will continue if property owners can afford to pay their costs of hooking up) and the constant reneging on Haliburton's new 18-bed chronic care facility, Jenkins feels the province's love affair with David Peterson is over.

"We're starting on a level highway, and the passing lane is clear," he said, adding the absence of an incumbent gives all three candidates an equal chance.

Jenkins also lashed out at the province's handling of May's Martin Lumber shutdown, saying jobs are available for the 125 displaced workers, particularly in the reforestation of the area.

"The 1985 marriage (between the Liberals and the New Democrats) ended 42 years of responsible government," he added.

Provincial Tory leader Mike Harris was to address the approximately 120 loyal supporters, but scheduling problems forced him to cancel.

After his speech, Jenkins dismissed suggestions the low standing of the federal Tories will hurt his chances.

"People around here vote for the person," he told reporters, hoping his background will appeal to the constituents.

"I grew up in a rural setting and went into business in the community," he said. "I understand rural people and their needs."

Many of Jenkins' responses were carefully guided by campaign whip David Gemmill, who frequently answered reporter's questions on his candidate's behalf.

But Jenkins did manage to repeat his objections to official bilingualism in Ontario, citing cumbersome expenses such as duplicating of services would require.

"The language of the province is English," Jenkins said, adding "You are a Canadian, and a Canadian first."

Also present on stage with Jenkins was federal M.P. Bill Scott who praised Jenkins' family and their contributions to the community.

"They've come up through the rank and file and are the blood of the community," he said. But for Jenkins to be successful, Scott believed everybody had to pull their weight.

"We have to talk ourselves up to the top of the list," he said. "We've got to talk positively because a candidate's trail is a hard trail." Scott celebrated his 25th year in Ottawa last year.

Al Maclean, from Simcoe East, set the tone in the evening's longest speech by explaining "There's a different mood in this province."

He pointed out there have been 33 new taxes added since the Liberals first took office, increasing provincial taxation by 132 per cent.

"That's a pretty unfair way to reach a balanced budget," he said, alluding to Ontario's finance minister Robert Nixon's two previous balanced budgets.

"The present government has old ideas and an outdated philosophy," he added, saying that it is impossible for a government to be all things to all people.

"This riding can be won," he assured the audience.

Family man out to capture Liberal votes

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

Pat O'Reilly received votes of confidence from local Liberals after a splashy, well-staged introduction and promises to put the party first.

At last Tuesday's nomination convention in Lindsay, O'Reilly, a real estate broker, was chosen as successor to retiring M.P.P. for Victoria-Haliburton, John Eakins.

Although exact numbers were not provided and the ballots were immediately destroyed, O'Reilly's campaign office says more than 400 of the 713 votes cast were for its candidate.

"The most important thing is to keep our party strong, to continue the strong tradition of the Eakins era," O'Reilly told the crowd of 800-plus Liberals at the Armoury.

And Ron Swain, who nominated him, says O'Reilly's unmarried status and the successful precedents of his siblings are just the tools needed to do this.

O'Reilly lives with his widowed mother on the family farm. Swain said, "Because he's not married, Pat's free to give his undivided attention to the riding."

As well, Swain added, "Pat has been shown examples of success by his five brothers and sisters." After listing the various accomplishments of O'Reilly's siblings, Swain concluded, "Out of this family of distinction has emerged Pat O'Reilly."

In contrast, Paula Osmuk's nomination speech for Flynn focussed on the candidate's own political experience and personal strengths.

"Jim's integrity and political experience alone make him an excellent candidate," Osmuk said, adding Flynn was instrumental in solving local problems during his term as Lindsay's mayor from 1978 to 1988. As well, Osmuk said Flynn's strong social conscience, sense of values, and commitment to youth were important attributes. Flynn is a teacher and department head in Cannington.

The O'Reilly supporters were a loud, visible group. Upon his introduction, O'Reilly was paraded through the Lindsay Armoury to the theme song from "Indiana Jones", played by the boisterous Kawartha Cavaliers.

O'Reilly's speech initially included his gratitude to his family for their support—"It makes me happy to have my family here."

He also spoke of his belief that the Liberals have done a lot of good in Ontario. "It's not my wish to put down parties other than the Liberals," he said, adding he is convinced the "political opportunity and political will" of the Liberals enable them to best serve the interests of Ontario.

As well, O'Reilly stressed the impact municipal restructuring will have on this area. "Rural areas need to be assured their concerns are respected," he said, adding that the interests of the agricultural industry are closely connected to the area's economic base.

O'Reilly touched on the issue of the 18 chronic care beds awaited by Haliburton County for the past five years. He did not mention Health Minister Elinor Caplan directly, or her decision to further postpone the building of this unit until the completion of the ongoing Study on Long Term Health Care Reform. Instead, he said the problem posed "the need for some creative solutions."

Saying he knew the whole county very well—"I have skied Sir Sam's and golfed Blairhampton"—O'Reilly said he was well-equipped to promote the county's tourism potential. "Let's not be bashful in presenting the advantages of countryside and town."

O'Reilly also said his sojourn in municipal politics has given him the necessary experience to deal with issues such as housing, day care and pollution. "I meet those issues daily and I'm aware of them," O'Reilly said in reference to his status as Deputy Reeve of Ops Township.

In sharp contrast to O'Reilly's glitzy introduction was the dignified manner in which Jim Flynn ascended the stage. After his introduction, he stood up from his front row seat and quietly walked up to the microphone.

As well, Flynn's criticism of the provincial and federal governments made for a more hard-hitting speech.

"I believe the County of Haliburton must be treated fairly by the Minister of Health," he said. Haliburton County had done its part in raising $440,000, and Caplan must be forced to honour her promises, Flynn added.

Flynn also referred to the closing of Martin Lumber mill in Harcourt. Mentioning a recent move to Peterborough by one of the government ministries, Flynn said similar offices here could employ many Haliburton residents. "I ask in fairness why not a move to Haliburton?...Why not a move to our two counties? That would be fair."

His mayoral post in Lindsay provided him with the experience to deal with the challenges of county restructuring and environmental problems, Flynn said. The Liberals' record on the environment was good, he said, but the party must remain at the forefront of environmental consciousness. "We must be leaders. We must say we stand for growth but will protect our environment."

"Your next M.P.P. must follow in the steps of John Eakins," Flynn said, adding Eakins had utilized provincial grants at every opportunity. "We need more jobs, higher incomes and more career choices for our young people."

As well, Flynn called for fairness from the federal government, in reference to closed doors at the Meech Lake discussions. "All Canadians must hear constitutional debates which must be held in open meetings. All Canadians' opinions must be respected, even if they disagree with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney."

And Ontario Treasurer Robert Nixon was among Flynn's targets: "Bob Nixon must be told by your M.P.P. that our municipal taxes are too high."

Violence against women and children was touched on as one of the major social problems confronting society. Flynn said the government must step up attempts to put an end to violence: "The public is not interested in revenge, but it does want fairness."

"To me, fairness means that every person deserves to be recognized, heard and cared about," Flynn concluded.

Liberals to work together 'for kids'

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

Some high-ranking Liberals offered kudos to both outgoing Victoria-Haliburton M.P.P. John Eakins and the Liberal party itself at last Tuesday's nomination convention.

Eakins, Minister of Financial Institutions Murray Elston, and Minister of Culture and Communications Hugh O'Neil were present in Lindsay's Armoury to see Pat O'Reilly nominated as the Liberal candidate for September's election.

Elston said "People like Eakins have shown us that with hard work you can be successful (in attaining your goals)." Praising the record of the Liberals, Elston said "We will never find a party anywhere that will be perfect, but we commit ourselves to making things a little more perfect."

And they have done this by listening to people, Elston said. "That's the way John Eakins has trained us...We take the time to listen."

O'Neil echoed Elston's praise for the Liberal's term thus far: "I'm pretty proud of the record of David Peterson and this government...We've made a lot of people mad, but we've got a lot of things done."

O'Neil also praised Eakins. "You've had a great member, somebody you owe a lot of respect to."

Eakins, O'Neil and Elston all said they had had to maintain neutrality in the selection of Eakins' successor.

"These people (O'Reilly and Flynn) put their thoughts clearly and concisely. These people know the issues of the area," Elston said.

Elston concluded that no matter who Eakins' successor is, all party members should work together to seek the election of that candidate.

"If you don't do it for (the candidate) or for John Eakins, or for me, do it for your kids."

"I assure you that people like Murray and I will give this riding our full support. We're going to hold onto the riding and go onto victory again," said O'Neil.

Moss's Pond report done

Dysart et al has received the engineer's report on the causes of the Moss's Dam flood.

However, Reeve Bill Davis says the municipality's lawyers and insurers want time to review the report before making it public.

"The pressure is on but I have to respect what they say," Davis says. He's also been asked not to discuss the report's findings.

On May 23, water from the dam rushed through Haliburton Village, causing extensive damage to homes and businesses along Victoria and Park Streets. Municipal workers were working at the Moss's Pond causeway two days before the flood. The report was to determine whether that had any relevance on the flood.

Twelve Mile Church celebrates its past

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

IT WAS ONLY WHEN the crowd made its way to this mist-shrouded shore on Twelve Mile Lake that the weather's disservice became clear. The serene little white church stood patiently waiting, modest in stature and on this day celebrating its 100th birthday, modest in jubilation. No bells were tolling, but the strength of history was luring one and all to its side.

With Sunday morning's light rain, the outdoor Twelve Mile Church centennial celebration had to be transferred to the Zion United Church's Christian Education building in Carnarvon. The celebration was no less joyous, but the absence of the guest of honour was sorely felt, especially when the service concluded with the designation of a plaque at Twelve Mile.

While today it is a restful place on the shore of a busy lake, Twelve Mile Church was the focal point for the small community of settlers. After leaving behind other homes, other lifestyles, these Presbyterians held fast to their faith.

When they first arrived, this area south of Carnarvon was known as Brown's Station. A small log church was built, but the congregation soon outgrew the tiny building. It was dismantled and some of the materials sold to raise money to build a new church on the same site. The small pulpit, built by William Chambers, was maintained to be placed in the new building.

The four acres of land deeded from the Crown were cleared, but some of the red and white pines were left to stand. They may have been waist high in 1880, but 110 years later, they lord over the cemetery with a majesty no church steeple could ever hope to achieve.

Earliest records show that John Howell was buried here in 1877. "On September 16, 1890," reads a brief history written by Bill and Frank Chambers, "work on the present structure was started by members of the congregation under the direction of John Johnston. All work was voluntary except for Mr. Johnston who received $1.00 per day for supervision. Material was purchased in Fenelon Falls and was shipped by train to Haliburton and picked up there by horse and wagon for final delivery to the site.

"Work on the church was completed by mid-December, 1890. A drive shed was added in 1894 and was removed in the 1930s as it was no longer in use."

In 1905, talks began with the Presbyterian Churches of Haliburton, Minden, Allsaw and Twelve Mile about possible unification with the Methodist and Congregationalist churches. Apparently there was not much dissention, for in 1925, all became United. At this time, Twelve Mile became a sister church with Zion. Jean Bate's pictorial display helped to bring these days alive for people.

The church's strength is in its purity. Arriving from Highway 35, you see the white frame church from the back. There are those famous tall pines, giving rest and protection to the graves below, whose haunting silhouettes are reminders of those gone by. The lake opens up in front of you, quiet now in the drizzle. You wander slowly through the stones until you reach the front door and climb up the steep nar-

Cottagers need to keep on top of issues, development plans

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Knowledge is the cottager's most powerful ally in preserving the quality of the lake, Percy Lake cottagers were told Saturday night.

Whether fighting the Gypsy moth, keeping an eye on council's actions, or being informed about development plans, a little information will go a long way.

"You really have to be aware, you have to know the mechanisms, you have to take risks," said Brady Lake's Fran Snelling, one of the evening's three guest speakers. Her association got burned on one development and now is prepared to prompt an Ontario Municipal Board hearing over another. "We're not afraid of the OMB anymore. We're prepared to fight for what we believe is right."

When her association formed 25 years ago, the major concerns were roads and signs. Then, about seven years ago, development began moving east of Muskoka, placing sudden demand on Highland properties and lakes. Brady Lake is north of Minden.

With the first proposed development, several Brady Lake cottagers went to the Land Division Committee to outline their concerns. "We thought they'd really be interested in what we had to say." Instead, the chairman "greeted us with arrogance and rudeness. We were shocked at the treatment we got."

Now they know opinions aren't enough. "You need documented information, statistics and data that really support your concerns." To get help, the association approached Ryerson Polytechnical students who need to do Lake Capacity Studies as part of their thesis. The students will do their study on Brady Lake.

As well, the association is keeping in constant contact with the municipality. "We must keep them aware of what we're doing and not just when there's (a controversy)," Snelling said.

Councils often do not have enough information to make their decisions, she added, even though repercussions are far-reaching. Therefore, the onus should be on developers to provide the capacity studies and relevant impact information.

To become even more efficient, the Brady Lake association is banding together with other area lake associations. "Sometimes we feel so impotent. We really need some kind of mechanism to ensure that council at least in part represents the cottagers."

Yet the association is not "anti-development" Snelling stressed. "This has been a very poor com-

Voices rise in song and tribute to Twelve Mile

Here the pews are as upright as the citizens who fill them every Sunday evening in the summer. (There's still no electricity so winter services are held at Zion.) Stiff upper lips in the face of hardship; stiff, right-angled pews in the face of faith.

Plainness never seemed so beautiful. The polished floor, the clear windows letting in the serenity of nature, the white and blue walls, the austerity of the symbols of worship.

Next to the pulpit is a handsomely-restored pump organ, originally donated by Mrs. Cryderman "some time after the church was opened." Thanks to Gordon Angus's expertise, the organ responded magnificently to the touch of organist Melissa Stephens as she delighted the people who toured the church after the service.

It was through song that the celebrants honoured the church and all it stood for. Before the service began at Zion, it seemed all the possible old favourites were brought back to life: Holy, Holy, Holy; Just a Closer Walk With Thee; How Great Thou Art; In the Garden; Just as I am. But then during the service were spirited renditions of Faith of Our Fathers, What a Friend We Have in Jesus, Onward Christian Soldiers.

With Zion's popular choir to guide the congregation, the outpouring of melodic worship led guest preacher Rev. Grant MacDonald to comment, "I've never heard so many ex-Presbyterians sing so lustily in all my life."

The theme of the celebration was "100 years...God has blessed us." This was reflected in the Bible readings by former Camarvon Rev. Doug Miller and the rather humorous Rev. Jack Spenceley, a retired United Church minister.

Rev. Clifford Elliott, a summer worshipper and minister at Bloor Street United, called to mind the earlier congregations. They faced hardship and strife to reap a livelihood from the fields and forests and new, different challenges face those who follow.

"We know we live in critical times for humanity and even our planet," he led in prayer. We have already had so much conflict and war, "may we give the best of our lives for peace" and the environment. All should heed the "call to take responsibility for the purity of the lake and the sky above it. Help us to love and care for your Creation...Fill us with the excitement that comes from knowing nothing can separate us from Your love."

Introducing his long-time friend, Dick Thompson said Rev. MacDonald "has always given to his community" of Kitchener. The guest speaker was born here, educated here and has spent the past 25 years preaching here. Seen every second Sunday on CKCO television, Rev. MacDonald's sermons have been collected in the book, The Cloud Rider. An endowment fund for a palliative care unit at the Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital has also been set up in his name.

There's a room in his home, Rev. MacDonald began, which is like a sanctuary. Here among the crumpled pieces of paper he can gather his thoughts and be calmed by the "restful, peaceful and mysterious" presence of the room.

One day, his thoughts drifted back to a summer evening 35 years ago. Sixteen of his friends and family were squeezed on the flat-bottomed boat coming back to Drag Lake Lodge after a day of fishing and a shore supper. The aromas of gas and fish wafted through his memories and "I can remember what it was like to be 12 again."

On one trip, the sun had been pouring into the boat all day. The same sun made the passengers thirsty and Rev. MacDonald's Uncle George pulled out one of the bottles of pop which had been stored in the bottom of the boat. He took one swig, "made a face and said 'Pour it back in the horse.'"

The memory made Rev. MacDonald laugh as he sat in his sanctuary. Then he "felt at peace, a quiet in the soul. The memory had brought back all the happiness of the past. I needed that."

By remembering the past, whether our own pasts or Twelve Mile Church's, "we can find the truths of our lives. Praying, too, is a closed, quiet journey...and is that not the underlying reason of anniversaries of churches?

"We're to remember, and when we do, memories give us a profound sense of peace, that all is well. There is a peace that comes from looking back...As we remember, we realize we were never alone and maybe that's at the heart of remembering."

With peace about the past comes hope about the future. "Hope is the driving power, the outermost edge of our faith. To remember the past is to say we are here today by a grace which made us survive; God brings me into the future. See my cup of hope, the promise of salvation."

As everyone gathered to pay tribute to the past, Rev. MacDonald hoped they could find some special room in which to find the thankfulness of all that faith has wrought.

In her thanks, Evelyn Coleman said "all we wanted to do was honour and glorify God," and Rev. MacDonald's words had certainly helped them do so.

It was co-chairperson Joan Fennell who closed the service, noting that music had always been one of the strong traditions of Zion and Twelve Mile Churches. It's part of the churches' heritage which was given due honour in this celebration.

After the service, people were invited to Twelve Mile Church for the dedication of a plaque which was affixed to a large stone in front of the church.

"Rocks figure largely in scripture," said present-day minister, Rev. Ed Moll. In the Old Testament, people placed rocks in piles and thus could make churches wherever their travels took them.

A rock may seem a plain way to celebrate the centennial, but Rev. Moll reminded the dozens of people gathered about the other plain things in Christian heritage: a manger in a barn, bread and wine, those walls, this roof. God makes all these things holy by His presence. He is the One in whom we stake our lives.

"May all who worship in this place, who come here to mourn and remember, remember that God is faithful and his love is from everlasting to everlasting."

munity for a long time. Now there's prosperity and they want to grab a piece. That's natural and we have to help the community attain that."

Other things can harm a lake as well. Gary Clements of the Minden office of the Ministry of Natural Resources talked about the Gypsy moth threat to the 30-plus cottagers gathered at the end of a road.

In 1981, this voracious leaf-eater was found in the Kingston area. Easily carried by wind, the moths also branch out into new territory by laying egg masses on such things as trailers. Before becoming moths, the caterpillars can defoliate a tree. Usually the tree can grow a new cover that year, but infestation puts another burden on trees already stressed by drought and pollution. If caterpillars denude conifer trees, the tree will likely die.

Egg masses have been found in Haliburton County, especially in Lutterworth. Favourite trees are oak and poplar and fortunately there are few trees of this type near Brady Lake. That doesn't mean cottagers can be complacent.

The third guest speaker was Bill Davis, Dysart et al reeve. He said he hadn't heard many rumblings from Percy Lake. On tax increases, he said "I can't make any apologies. The municipality is feeling cutback restraints. This year we received $20,000 less funding and have to spend $40,000 more. We set a realistic budget and we're sticking to it."

Lake associations form a "very viable part of our community," Davis said, urging Percy Lakers to share their views during the municipality's updating of its official plan. As well, Davis wants the association to petition the MNR to renew the mandate of the Gypsy moth spray program past its 1991 deadline.

Former Percy Lake president Gord Benner asked Davis about a backlot development plan on near-by Haliburton Lake.

"It's tough for this council," Davis said about its difficulties in defining what backlot development was. "There's been no real line of demarcation."

Zoning rules do say that rural lots need to be 50 acres. Building permits can't be denied, but severances can be.

Another member congratulated the municipality on the recycling and well-kept conditions at the Haliburton Lake dump. Part of the credit, Davis says, goes to the residents who had a spring cleanup. But the new person hired this year by the municipality has also done an excellent job, he added. Council will no longer allow the dumping of brush.

In wrapping up the meeting, President Henry Dykstra noted lake residents were finally going to get telephones installed. "Bill Davis said 'give me a call' (if we have any complaints.) He didn't realize why he wasn't hearing from us."

A waste

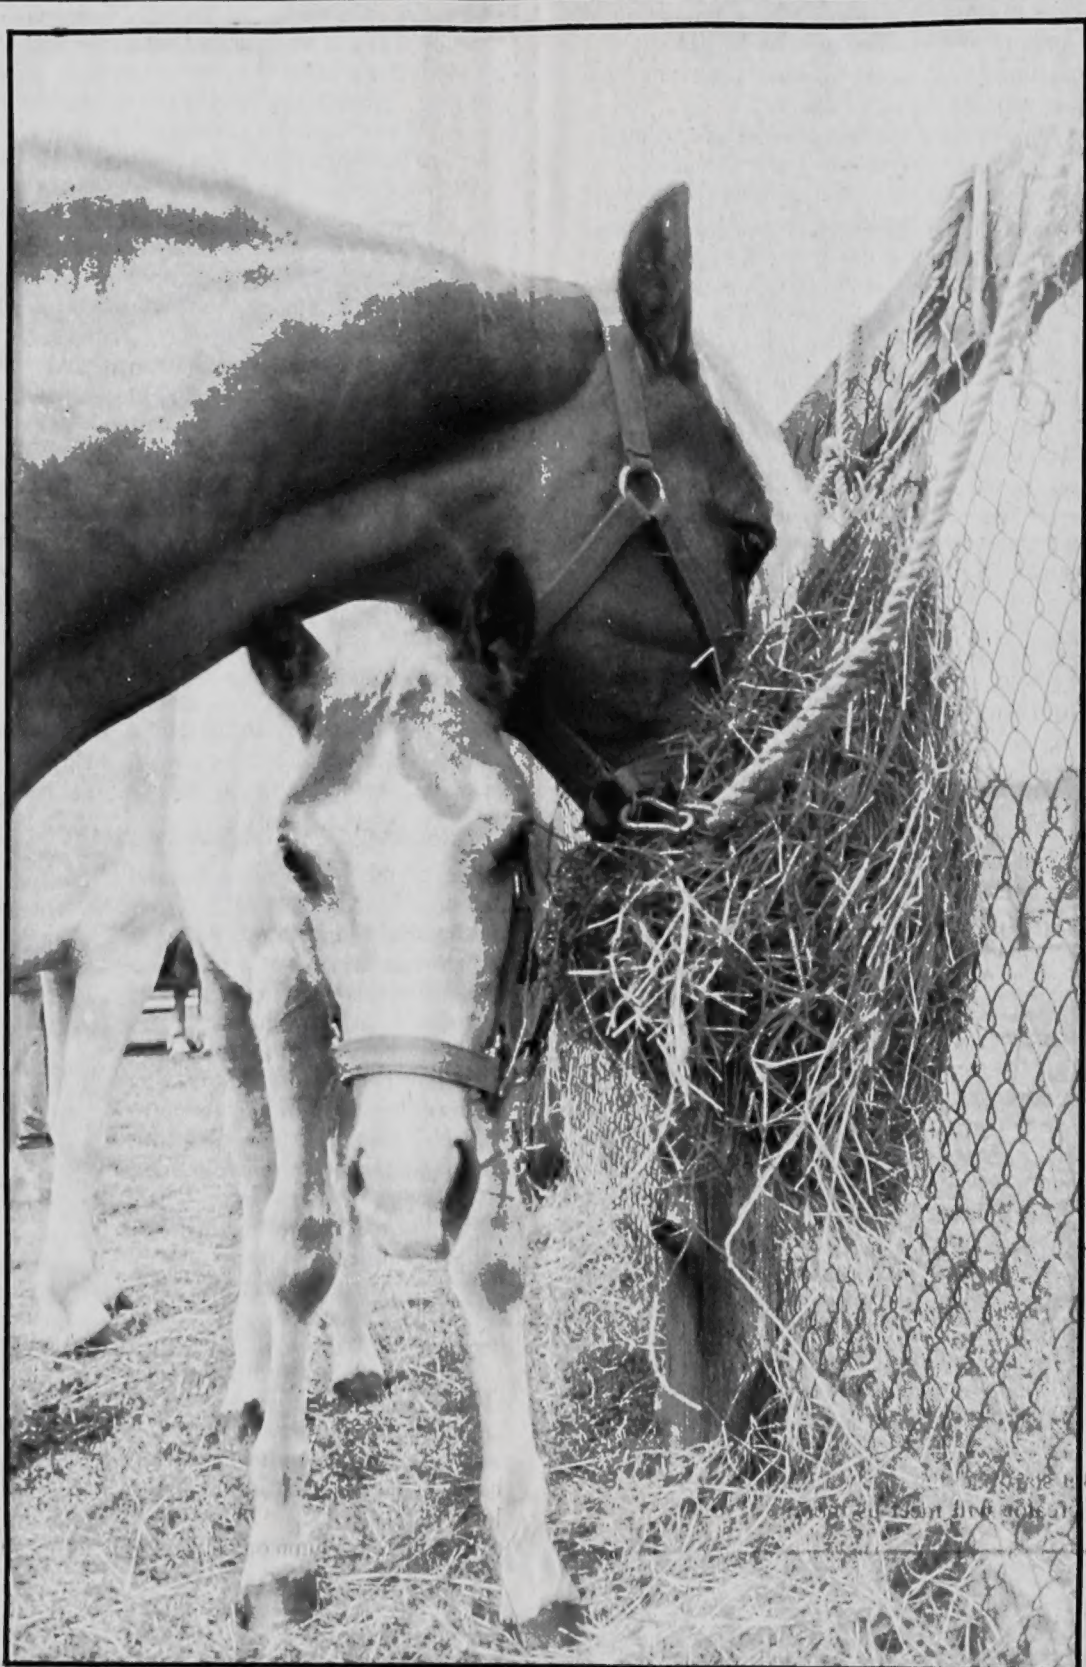

The provincial election now underway is less an exercise in democracy than in opportunism. Premier David Peterson called the election because he and his advisors decided the mood of the electorate was sufficiently complacent to assure another Liberal victory. There were no pressing issues. In fact, it is precisely because there is nothing for the people to decide that Peterson and his cronies are wasting $40 million of the taxpayers' money on the September election. If your first priority is to ensure that you get reelected, call an election when nobody is particularly interested in anything. That way you can coast along, mouthing the usual platitudes, making the usual empty promises, and be assured that no one will take much notice. It is, after all, summer. Most people are either on holidays or wishing they were. Politics has a low priority in the sultry heat of August, and that is precisely why the Liberals have gone to the polls, fully two years before their five year mandate expired. In other seasons, people might be more inclined to listen carefully to what is said by all three parties during the campaign, and try to sort out what few grains of wisdom or philosophy there may be among the bromides and the lies. They might even take notice of campaign promises, and expect the winner to honour one of two of them. But in summer, who cares? Apparently, just about no one. If they did, Peterson would have been excoriated by the press and the public for squandering taxpayers' money on an election devoid of issues. He was not, and that says much about the cynical resignation or just plain indifference with which Ontarians view the political process.

Elections should be a chance for all of us to decide what kind of society we want to live in, and how much we're willing to spend for the privilege. We ought to have clear choices. We deserve candidates with the wisdom to form their own ideas and the courage to stand behind them. Vacuous rhetoric should be greeted with contempt, not applause. Intellectual prowess and past accomplishment should be key criteria in assessing who is worthy of support. The electorate should demand to know what every promise will cost. Politicians should be compelled to tell us how they'd cut spending, or if they don't think it can or should be cut, how many more tax dollars they're prepared to wrench from us, how much more incentive they're prepared to destroy.

It would be pleasing to imagine that voters in Victoria/Haliburton can have a small but meaningful say in how the province is governed, but experience has shown us otherwise. When John Eakins — a fine and honest man who did the best he could — served in Opposition, no one expected constituents' concerns to get a high priority with the Conservatives. But when Peterson first grabbed power by pandering to the NDP, and subsequently when the Liberals won a sweeping majority, local people believed that having member on the government side — indeed a cabinet minister — would make a difference. In the end, it meant very little. The hospital expansion project was tossed aside and trod upon by Elinor Caplan. The sewer extension and sewage plant expansion faced delay after delay, until costs have almost put it out of reach. What we did get, however, was taxed to an extent unprecedented in Ontario history, by a government whose philosophies lie firmly on the left, by a premier who never ceases, in his sanctimonious, arrogant pontifications, to try to absolve his government from blame for spending profligately, for hurting small business, for dispiriting the middle class.

The present election is proof that democracy in Ontario has been debased. The people didn't want an election, but one was called. The opposition parties are ineffective — the Conservatives at their lowest ebb in more than 40 years, the NDP spouting the same tired anti business, anti profit, anti work ethic cant that the party has been mouthing for years, to very little effect. It's the perfect opportunity for Peterson to grab another five years of power. And if it costs $40 million, so what? There are plenty more tax dollars to be grabbed where those dollars came from.

Rights of women ruining marriage

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

"The pen being mightier than the sword", Zoe Chilco, whom I have never met as yet, made many derogatory remarks in the Aug. 1 Echo relating to my deliberate remarks lamenting to "What this world is coming to, if we don't get back to the teachings of the bible, we might well be a lost society". These were made at a public open council meeting, supporting "Take back the night" to take place in Minden September 15, 1990.

I have, for forty years, believed and raised my eight children on the premise of "Spare the rod and spoil the child". Not by the illustrious Dr. Spock's book, who now regrets having written it.

I sincerely believe that any woman, who permits any man to abuse her or her children in this day and age, with the network assistance available to them, is a sorely lost responsible person. Jude King is attempting to be there for them.

The sanctity of marriage, being torn apart by rights, rights of women, etc. etc., bothers me immensely. I married for the love of a beautiful woman, an equal partner-companion to take on the challenges of the world. Respect of one another's strengths and weaknesses, understanding each other's needs — Betty Freiden's book didn't help much. We had to solve our problems to a compromising solution, by ourselves, loving your children with what is now termed "Tough Love". Caring for people is why I ran for council, only to help in any way that I can as directed by a much higher power than this individual. To serve my fellow persons is a burden I accept as a responsibility bestowed upon me to the best of my ability; perfection eludes me.

We need, in my opinion, a lot of caring people to become members of the many Haliburton Support Groups, to contribute their time and talents to help their neighbours. We don't need heresy interpretation of remarks taken out of context. Assuming what people say makes an Ass-out-of-u-and me, Ms. Zoe Chilco. Your letter purports hatred of men coming through.

Almighty dollar closes post office

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada, Brian Mulroney.

Hon. Sir:

For the first time in my life, I am writing a letter to the Prime Minister of my country. Am I upset? Very much so — to the point that I could easily take drastic action against the individual or individuals responsible for my present feelings.

The people of this community have just been informed that the Norland Post Office (Victoria County) will be closed within 90 days — no consultation, no appeals, no arguments — take it and like it! A private retail postal outlet will be provided if a satisfactory sucker can be found.

The Norland Post Office is a federal building constructed nine years ago when, evidently, the volume of business warranted its construction. Since that time, the volume of business has certainly increased if population is any criterion. Yet, in the name of the almighty dollar, it is to be closed.

Perhaps your memory needs refreshing? I am sure you once knew that governments at all levels in Canada came into being with the primary purpose of providing essential public services to the citizens of the country and, in exchange for such services, government was allowed to collect taxes to pay the cost of same.

One of the first of such public services provided was a system for the delivering of mail. To my knowledge, no one has ever objected to his or her tax money being used to pay for this service. Nor can I recall any outcry and demand from the citizens of this country that Canada Post should pay its way — at all costs and/or to the detriment of the quality of service provided.

On the other hand, I have heard many objections, strong objections, registered against the increasingly prevalent practice of squandering our tax money to

If you enjoy fishing and can pick up the Much Music channel you won't want to miss the television program "Outlaws and Heroes" which will be aired on Tuesday August 14 at 4:00 p.m. and again at 8:00 p.m. The host for the show is Denise Donlen and this program should be of interest to all of us who live in this area. It's fishing with Rocky Crawford and the show was taped in Haliburton on Miskwabi and Long Lake. Some of you might have caught the program as it was presented last night (Tuesday, Aug. 7th).

It's a big week of entertainment coming up for the people of Haliburton and area. To-night (Wednesday, August 8th) it's the annual Rotary Club of Haliburton's Summer Carnival and Parade and this coming weekend Friday and Saturday and Sunday, August 10-11-12 Haliburton Legion Branch 129 will be presenting Haliburton's Fifth Annual Bluegrass Festival. This year's outstanding line-up will be starring Bluegrass Thoroughbreds and Paul Adkins and the Borderline Band. Jim Higgins will be the MC for the weekend event. This family oriented Jamboree in a park setting will also feature many of your bluegrass favourites. Rain or shine it will all take place at Glebe Centennial Park.

Kay McWalters, wife of Gordon McWalters formerly of Haliburton, certainly knows what she is doing when it comes to fishing. Kay recently landed a 22 lb Brown Trout at Port Darlington and she has entered the big fish in the Oshawa this Week Fish Contest. It should prove to be a winner. Gordon and Kay now reside in Oshawa and Gord operates a Salmon Charter Boat in the Lake Ontario area.

I have been asked to announce that the Sunday Night Supper Club will be held this coming Sunday, August 12th—5 p.m. at the West Guilford Community Centre. If you are in the mood for a great home-cooked meal you won't want to miss this one. Marge Nicholls, who is rated as one of the top cooks in the area, will be cooking the meal. Following the dinner an evening of games will take place for all those attending along with coffee and tea.

Workmen were busy on Tuesday, August the 7th re-surfacing the tennis courts at the Rotary Beach in Haliburton. They are expected to be open for tennis once again this weekend.

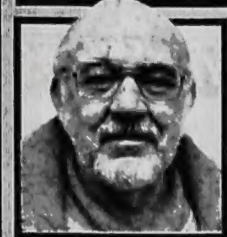

The 126th Haliburton County Fair will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday August 17, 18 and 19 at Minden, Ontario. While the exhibits are being judged on Friday night, there will be free admission to Conklin's Midway. Grounds are open at 9:00 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday, with an admission fee of $4.00 for adults and $2.00 for children. Free car parking will be provided at the Fairgrounds. The Parade will start at 12:00 noon on Saturday, followed by the Official Opening at 1:00 p.m. English, Western, Haflinger, light and heavy horse shows will be held throughout the day on Saturday, with a light horse draw at 5:00 p.m. Sunday features include Tractor and 4X4 Truck Pulls at 1:00 p.m. and the Heavy Horse Draw at 4:30 p.m. Dance on Saturday night to the music of Summerwind for an admission fee of $5.00.

Each year the Rotary Club of Haliburton holds an auction sale night for their members and their wives. Two weeks ago it was Auction Sale night once again at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall and they tell me that close to $9,000 was raised for community service work.

POINTS OF VIEW

Birth pangs of radical culture

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

THESE ARE, as everyone knows so well, changing times. That is, our familiar cultural & social values are giving way. For many of us this time of radical transition in Canadian life is filled with anguish. We are confused, uncertain about what to believe in or to live for. Our friends and kids seem to be unreliable. They don't uphold the values we lived by anymore. We are often mildly depressed regretting the loss of rich traditions and simple, meaningful relationships.

There is no question about the breakdown in family life, and the loss of the sense of loyalty and mutual helpfulness in the community. There is sorrow about what a good life used to be, the place of sacrifice in helping others in strife and difficulty which gave nobility to human lives. There is rarely a sense of personal dignity that an individual can have from an honest day's work.

God is no longer in his (or her) heaven and all is not right with the world. Even the churches seem to be abandoning their expected task as a moral and spiritual stronghold in these times when they are needed the most. Folks have given up on the Canadian Churches.

These are times of great disillusionment, sheer sorrow ebbs and flows in the heart day after day. Many have just given up and want to be left alone to enjoy what they can. Chronic fatigue eats at each day's energy and worries us about ourselves, our health, and our waning courage.

George Bernard Shaw's words seem so expressive of the modern spirit that we have them taped to the cottage wall: "this is the true joy in life: being used for a purpose recognized by yourself as a mighty one, and being a force of nature instead of a feverish, selfish little clod of ailments and grievances, complaining that the world will not devote itself to making you happy."

The trouble is we fall into a "cloud of ailments and grievances" because we can't seem to find that all-consuming "mighty purpose." Young people aren't the only ones beset by this modern malady of purposelessness. Folks in their twenties and especially many who are thirty something feel like a lost generation while older folks feel robbed and forgotten.

The simple truth is that we are all experiencing the birth pangs of a new and radically different culture. Because we are in the midst of the transition, we are confused and frustrated and lost, but as we move toward the clarity of the new day, our spirits lift and tasks that will give purpose to our living will call us out of our self-pity and self-preoccupation.

In spite of our nostalgia and despair there is also a growing readiness in us to welcome the new ideas and creative opportunities that tomorrow brings. Some folks visiting our cottage this summer spoke of a profound sense of anticipation that they feel, a growing excitement and readiness to let go of the deadening and dying past and an eagerness for the challenges of what is to come next. The only problem is that we are still very much in the dark about what our world will become and how to take our place in it.

There have been many seductive forces that have tried to predict the future but have proven to be dead ends. (See: Max Dublin's book, "Future hype" for an excellent discussion of the modern illusions that want to define the future for us. Patrick's Book Store will have it). Not to mention all of the self-serving lies that have bluffed folks into intellectual and financial bankruptcy (See: Jacques Ellul's book, "Technological Bluff"), as well as innocent souls into the "new" spirituality. (See: Vincent Donovan's "Christianity Rediscovered").

Though the pitfalls are many and the need to take the future by force is strong within us, we need to do that simple business that one does while waiting: decide what to pack and what to leave behind, what is essential and what really is not.

There is a tremendous amount of hope stirring amidst the ashes of our great culture that died long ago. This hope is getting folks to their feet again and making ready hearts of courage and minds of creative imagination. This budding hope commands readiness to let go of those things we at one time bet our lives on: our professions, possessions, and familiar way of life. Hope is readying for pain and sacrifice and at the same time stretching out open hands to receive what is to come, open minds to understand, and eyes to see the new for what it is. Hope includes an impatient discontent with dead things that promised life. Hope in restless, irritated eagerness poised on the edge of tomorrow ready to help build the foundation of a new world that we can not even imagine from here.

But start packing. Travel light, as in every age, the creator will meet us there.

Fun and money at same time

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

IT WAS THE SUMMER of '57. He was 16 years old, full of big plans, ambitions for wealth and the blind optimism that follows on the heels of having parents and friends behind you. Together with his best friend Buck, he had a money-making scheme that couldn't fail. For two months of that year's twelve, the world would be their oyster.

They had an old panel van his dad had come across. The older man overhauled the engine and he and Buck painted it white, inside and out. They were going into the garbage collecting business. For 50 cents a pick-up they would collect their neighbours' garbage and haul it to the dump. Tuesday and Thursday were the pick-up days and at $1 a week per cottage, working only two days a week, they figured they couldn't lose.

The first morning his father woke him at 6:30. "Come on, get up," he called. "If you're going to collect garbage, you better get a move on."

Bleary-eyed, he splashed water on his face, threw on some clothes and drove the white van over to Buck's. They figured they'd start at the top end of the lake and work their way down, since in those days there was only one dump and it was at the south end. As they drove by driveways to their starting point, they saw no garbage cans waiting out front. "They'll probably be there on our way back," he told Buck confidently.

The first stop was Mrs. Kay's. No garbage. They knocked on her door and roused her from a sound sleep. "It's only 7 o'clock in the morning boys," she stated, somewhat surprised to see them standing there in their coveralls. "Come back later."

No garbage was set out at the next cottage either on the next or the next. By the tenth driveway they knew they were getting nowhere fast. Finally one of the cottagers explained that no one would leave the garbage out overnight because of the animals. And it being summertime, vacation time for all of them, they weren't up before 7 o'clock. Besides, many of the husbands only came up on weekends, so the women got their kids to help them haul the cans out to the front of the driveway. Come back around 11 o'clock, they were told and they'd have all the garbage they wanted. So he and Buck went back to bed for a couple of hours and started over just before noon. And boy was there garbage then!

They got into a real routine. Every Tuesday and Thursday they'd sleep in until 10 o'clock and then hit the road. It took them a couple of hours to make their rounds and most of the time they didn't even have to touch the stuff. There were kids all along their route, just itching for a ride in the garbage van. They were only too happy to carry the refuse over to the van and pile it in, in return for a free ride. Playing at being garbage men made them feel important. He and Buck chuckled at their good fortune. It seemed almost criminal to make money so easily.

The last stop before the dump was the restaurant. Mrs. Carter, the owner, paid them not in money but in food. Twice a week she presented them with a loaf of her homemade bread and a fresh-baked pie. They'd carry on to the dump, unload, then stop at the store on their way back for a pound of butter and a quart of milk. As they drove back to their cottages, they'd gorge themselves on the warm bread slathered with butter. It dripped down their chins as they tore off big hunks. Then they'd polish off the pie, washing it down with milk. They'd arrive home with full stomachs, full pockets and the rest of the day spread before them to do what they wished. It was a good life.

Unfortunately, because the van was old and they drove it hard, there were a lot of breakdowns. His father ended up spending most weekends doing repairs. It seemed that everything that could go wrong with the van's engine, tires, wheels and exhaust system, did go wrong before the summer was out.

But for he and Buck it was quite a summer. With money to their names, they gained a new respect from their peers, especially the girls. The boys couldn't wait to spend their new-found wealth and went out just about every night. Of course they wouldn't dare pick up a girl in a smelly old garbage van. So every Tuesday and Thursday right after supper, they'd scrub down the van's interior with disinfectant dissolved in a bucket of water. While it didn't end up smelling like a rose, it was quite acceptable.

One night near the end of the summer, he and Buck were going to meet some girls at the other end of the lake. His mother asked him if they'd drive her and Mrs. Wallace from next door, down to the hall to play bridge. As they approached the hall, Mrs. Wallace asked him if he'd mind stopping at the store. She was out of cigarettes and would give him the money if he'd run in and buy them for her. She said while she appreciated the ride, she didn't want anyone to know she was riding in the garbage van. A pleasant though somewhat proper woman, she was adamant that she and his mother stay out

Toads, ties and auto plates

IT SEEMS THAT whenever I write a column, something comes up soon afterwards on the same subject that I would have included. And sometimes it takes a little longer...

Recently, a column on personalized licence plates was followed within a few days by a story from Britain about how they handle them over there. Apparently they are so popular over 'ome that they have a government sale of unreleased plates.

They're sold by auction to the highest bidder, it seems, and the fourth such sale just brought in the equivalent of $1.6 million (Canadian). Top price of $54,000 was paid by the chairman of a television firm, who apparently really wanted one that spelled out 'FAX IT.'

A few weeks before I wrote about the auto plates, I got into the area of exotic pets, including some big toads that have been getting attention in Florida and Australia. Well, last week there were a series of stories out of Toronto about a bufo marinus that a Toronto man has owned for eight years.

These exotic brownish-gray monsters, also known as cane toads, are the ones that can poison dogs. Apparently, according to a TV show the owner saw, the secretions can cause hallucinations if ingested by humans.

So what did the owner do? Well, he stuck his fingers into the toad's gooey secretions and licked them, then passed some along to his buddy! They both immediately got sick as dogs (see paragraph above) and were rushed to hospital.

It took a week, but these two dandies are both alive and back home now, courtesy of OHIP and your tax dollars. The toad has been donated to the Metro Toronto Zoo...

And it was in March that I commented on how the new management has been smearing the good name of Walt Disney. In July, the Toronto Star headlined "Critics see Disney as the neighborhood bully," and gave them a good going over.

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

WE JUST GOT BACK from another week-end at our favorite local hide-away. Ed had an urgent desire to be unavailable by phone. Friday was the last day of Summer School at Sir Sandford, and, as much as it's always a good time, the intensity of those five weeks are also exhausting. So I whisked him away for three days of R & R.

We have evolved a unique relationship with the hide-away clientele. This is the tourist group who come tubing each summer. Some of them also participate in a scavenger hunt I take great glee in devising in mid-September.

Every week, somebody asks Ed or me, "How much do you charge for the tubing tours?" They are often aghast that we aren't trying to make a buck off it. But, you see, if we did that, the whole complexion of the summer would change. We would lose our right to make choices. We would have to cater to everyone's whims. We would have to tube at their convenience, whether we felt like it or not. We could not say "No." We couldn't go tubing alone or with small groups of friends. People would complain about one thing or another and we'd have to refund their money. With all those have tos and couldn'ts, tubing would no longer be fun. Besides, the insurance would break us.

All summer, familiar faces of summer school students, faculty, tubing companions and lodge guests flit in and out of our lives. While they remember us as their contact people for school, gallery, or tubing, we often find ourselves running around behind in whispers asking, "What's their

Heineken Yard tests mettle of hundreds of Minden racers

Between four and five hundred runners took part in the Heineken Yard on Friday night. After completing the 7.4 km race, bottles of water were thirstily grabbed by runners who wanted a quick way to cool down. Among the participants - whose efforts raised money for AMICI, a camping organization - were Peter Hynard and Tina Moga, at right, and Matthew Creelman, at far right.

Warriors bounce back, 7-6

by MICHAEL McHUGH
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton Legion Warriors managed to hang on to a 7-6 victory over Bobcaygeon last Tuesday night, as they tried to erase the dismal memories of last week's back-to-back losses.

They jumped to a quick start in the first inning. Erin Nicholls hit a three-run homer to drive in Tim Davies and Mike MacNaull who had each hit singles.

The diamond was quiet until the fourth inning, when Tran LaRue crossed the plate giving the Warriors a 4-0 lead.

Bobcaygeon weakly bounced back in the fifth inning, but only managed to score one run.

In the Warrior's half of the fifth, Nicholls was up to the test again, hitting a double with men in scoring position. He also pitched the entire game for Haliburton. LaRue followed up with a solo home run to give the Warriors a 3-run inning and a 7-1 lead over the Stingers.

Bobcaygeon started their come back in the sixth inning, scoring two runs to close the gap to 7-3.

Those dreaded last bats again threatened to finish off the Warriors. The Stingers scored three runs to bring them to within one, before Haliburton finished them off to take the win.

"It was a little tense for awhile," said Warrior manager Scott LaRue.

With Tuesday's victory, Haliburton takes over sole possession of second place with 8 wins, 9 losses, and three games remaining in the schedule. Fenelon Falls remains way out in the lead with 17 wins and only two losses. Each team plays 20 games.

In third place are the Minden Hustlers, followed by the Stingers.

Tuesday's game was a make-up game for the Warriors, who are also owed a game by Minden. Because of the Haliburton Rotary Carnival on Wednesday, the Warrior's regular Tuesday night game is cancelled, although they will be playing Minden Thursday night at the Haliburton diamond.

Rock bass derby

The Fourth Great Annual Lake Wenona Rock Bass Derby was held Sunday morning, July 29.

Seventeen youngsters caught a total of 80 lbs. of rock bass.

First prize went to William Dunlap with his catch of 22 lbs; second prize went to Rob McBurnie who caught 15 lbs; third prize to Jonathan and Brent Moorehouse with 14-1/2 lbs; fourth prize to Jessica Lee with 11-3/4 lbs; and fifth prize to Katie Lee with 9 lbs.

All children received a "goodie bag" containing a boating safety poster and educational material with special emphasis on recreational boating. Hats and T-shirts were also distributed.

Major prizes consisted of rod and reel kits and Drag Lake swimmers enjoy the competition

by Al Ferguson

Once again it was the big weekend for members of the Drag Lake Property Owners Association to get together and test their athletic skills in events on both land and water.

While Saturday was fine, the rain that night, and drizzle on Sunday morning, cancelled the Fun Day activities. This was the first time that Fun Day has been cancelled in this writers' memory.

CED HURD MEMORIAL MILE SWIM

Registrations were up 30 percent for this challenging event which runs from Ernest Leinauer's to Peter Curry's beach. The resulting race was hard fought with entrants ranging in age from 10 to 65. The winner this year, in a very good time of 23:48, was Pegi Franklin. Pegi received the Ced Hurd Memorial trophy, a medallion, and a certificate attesting to her time. In second place was the winner from the past two years, Kylie Booth with time of 26:02. Third was Sandra Appleby with 26:15.

The Tom Young trophy for the youngest swimmer to complete the race went to Sarah Young with a time of 30:32. She edged out her twin brother Robert by one minute. The others who received their certificates were: Mike Lyons, Waldemar Butz, (the oldest), Christine Young, Robbie Booth, Amanda Reynolds, Susan Fink, Jim Fink, and Elizabeth Jones.

Al and Diana Ferguson ran the race with Art Ouellette as Course Marshall.

SWIM AND NOVELTY RACES

These events were held at the Larry Podmore beach on Drag Lake Saturday afternoon. Again, another fine turnout, with competitors of all ages going for the ribbons. Dave LaFerle organized this event and did his usual fine job, along with the judges and recorder.

The winners of the swimming races were: Ages 3-5: Scott Young, Gillian German, Dana Bell; Ages 6-9: Jill Koechowicz, Aaron Vice, Katie Morgan; Ages 10-12: Robbie Booth, Kendal Kowaluk, Kent McVean; Ages 13-15: Christine Young, Kylie Booth, Erin Morgan; Ages 20-30: Lindsay White, Kevin Dean, Ed Wiseman; Men Over 30: Rick German, Bill Booth, Don Young; Woman Over 30: Dorethea Butz.

In the canoe races, some took the long route to the finish line but they all did finish. The winners were: Ages 9-12: Robbie Booth and Rob Young, Elizabeth Jones and Sarah Young, Andrew German and David Morgan; Ages 13-15: Kylie Booth and Christine Young, Susie Fink and Sarah Young, Erin Morgan and David Morgan; Ages 20-30: Kevin Dean and Ed Wiseman, Heather O'Halloran and Paige MacKay, Rob Sommerville and Eric Murphy; Over 30: Bill Booth and Jim Fink, Rick German and Huw Morgan, Waldemar and Dorethea Butz.

names again."

Finally, after three or four years, some of them stick. A few have become good, though transient friends. We've become part of their holiday photo albums, their 'remember the time we...' It's a very pleasant kind of experience that must happen in every tourist town.

Another thing we've noticed, along with our usual travelling companions, is our strange behavior when we finally go on a real vacation. Having dealt with the tourist trade for a couple of summers seems to have caused us all to become very judgemental critics of every place we stop on our holidays. We try not to be the kind of tourists we dread dealing with, but we don't let anybody get away with treating us shabbily either. Rating each restaurant and over-night stay got to be a game on our trip up the St. Lawrence last fall.

As it turned out, with the singular exception of the Gananoque Inn, we were treated quite wonderfully everywhere we went. The problem with Gananoque was that it had been taken over by a corporation. Everyone working there was just putting in their time. The waiter was inexperienced, the food was wrong, the kitchen was irresponsible, the rooms were seedy, and the price was high.

I think we all came to the conclusion that bigger is not often better. A hotel can spend all the money in the world on saunas, exercise rooms, and rotating piano bars, but if the first person you met on your way in the door doesn't welcome you with a smile, it's all downhill from there on.

Parents and children all enjoyed Bar-B-Que'd hot dogs and cold pop served with thanks to Noel Hutchinson, Jack and Ariel Campbell, Monica Strickland and Darlene Moorehouse.

A good time was had by all.

While no one got a Hole-in-One to win a car, the Heart and Stroke Foundation won big with this fundraising event on Sunday at the Haliburton Highlands Golf Course. Golfers, such as this one on the 8th hole, raised more than $700 for the local organization.

DO I HEAR $200? Julie Kennedy displays one of the many works of art up for sale at the Haliburton Guild of Fine Arts Auction held last Thursday night at the PineStone. Organizers hope to beat last year's $3,000.

visibility of the committee. Dawn Berry-Merriam, a representative of the District Health Office who sits on the committee, says plans such as this take a lot of time. This may have created some of the frustration. "There's been a lot of work going on, but it's taken a long time...To do any study like this takes a lot of time to collect the data." Berry-Merriam says the county's directional plan for health care must be guided by provincial policy on long term health care reform. This has been outlined in "Strategies for Change: Comprehensive Reform of Ontario's Long-Term Care Services", a booklet created jointly by the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Community and Social Services, the Office for Senior Citizens' Affairs and the Office for Disabled Persons. There are three more chapters from this booklet to consider, Dikun says. The most important of these is the final one: "the strategies themselves." The results of the socio-demographic survey, focus group meetings and bed accommodation survey are influencing the development of the plan as well, the women said.

At the next meeting, "we will decide how to strategize...to determine where we hope to go," Dikun says. But the date by which the plan will be ready is still unknown. "One of our concerns is that we don't want to say 'It's going to take place on the 15 of September' and not be ready," Dikun says. "The frustration on the part of the public is because we don't know where we're going and how long it will take." Committee members are themselves frustrated by the length of time the plan has taken, she added.

Sold to the highest bidder: Guild of Fine Arts has auction

by MICHAEL McHUGH

OLD WOODEN CHAIRS creak as connoisseurs check out the competition and plan their strategies. A few nervous throats reticently cleared break the still air, thick with anticipation. An object is brought before a room of well dressed individuals who are about to partake in one of the few paradigms of pure capitalism, where people will set a dollar value on heretofore priceless works of art. Ladies and gentlemen, the bidding begins. If you went to last Thursday night's art auction held at PineStone Inn in support of the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts, this certainly was not the scene. Sure there were prices put on exquisite works of art that before had only value in the hearts of the artists. But the comfortable, cushioned chairs made little noise on the carpeted floor, and the sounds of the laughter frequently added to the carnival atmosphere indicative of a guild auction. For its part, PineStone donated the room for the auction.

Slightly fewer than 100 art pieces went on the block in the Guild's seventh annual art auction, and the work ranged from sterling earrings, to watercolors and hand-painted clothing. Auctioneer John Leonard did much to foster a relaxed atmosphere. A noted painter and budding sculptor, Leonard's knowledge of art in general, and the artists in this show specifically, guided the full house to some artistic bargains. "Let's start the bidding at $100, a quarter of the value," Leonard often said to skeptical buyers of the steals they were getting. He's been a teacher at the Haliburton School of Fine Arts for the last 19 years, and at times was persuasive in hiking up the bid. Included among the various works of art for sale were five passes to the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto, given out to the first person to correctly answer an art history skill testing question. One of the humorous events of the evening was the appearance of the Haliburton Chicken Man, later identified as Ed Muenzel, who donated 10 dozen brown chicken eggs. These eggs were one of the most hotly contested items on the block, with back and forth bids of $2 finally ending with a "sold, for $36." One piece was sold without even being in existence. Lois Etherington Betteridge, a silversmith, put up a promissory note offering to create an object worth 140 per cent of the final bid. The bidding quickly went from an opening of $130 to close at $205. The fortunate bidder will receive a personalized piece of art valued at $287. Although the final tally was unavailable, Lynd said she thinks this year's proceeds surpassed last year's total of $3000. Shelagh Mulherin and her husband walked away with a rather unique piece of art. Since their daughter collects owls, they picked up carving of an owl, but done with a chainsaw out of the stump of a tree. From Montreal, the Mulherins have had a cottage on South Kashagawigamog for 12 years, and Mrs. Mulherin has been coming to the school for 10 of them. "Maybe we'll move here," she said. Another happy purchaser was David Armstrong, a teacher at the school who bought an original Japanese brush painting by Cassandra Wyozkowski for $250. "I've been after her work for a long time," he proudly said.

Tories to lose votes

Continued from page 6 prop up bankrupt industries, to help "banana republics" build up large armed forces, to toss out interest free loans, or outright grants, as part of the old pork barrel routine. The original purpose of government, that of providing essential public services to the citizens who are then taxed for such, has evidently been made the lowest priority in the Tory scheme of things. The sad demise of Via Rail is another case in point. I ask that you urgently re-consider the present destructive process of closing rural post offices — and that you start that reconsideration by ordering Canada Post to leave the Norland Post Office open as a federal public service. Failure to do so will be a positive indication that the federal Tory party does not give one damn for rural Canada. And that failure will mean that I for one, will do another thing for the first time in my life. The next federal election will find my voting N.D.P. I sincerely hope that the majority of my fellow voters will do the same.

A RINGER!!

Gooderham's Horseshoe Days hit the mark as everyone gathers to celebrate holiday

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

GOODERHAM'S HORSESHOE DAYS didn't need a lucky talisman to guarantee a successful event. Instead, the participation of hundreds of people, all eager to enjoy the holiday weekend, made this year's celebration one to remember.

Dances, a midway, a baseball tournament, fun and frivolous contests, the demolition derby, the talented offerings of local and seasonal residents and of course a horseshoe tournament provided fun for everyone. Even the rain held off so people could take full advantage of all the activities.

There was mirth on the faces of the audience and plenty of coconut cream pie on the faces of the eight contestants in the pie eating contest on Saturday afternoon. Youngsters Matthew Phillips, Nicole Madill and Kyle and Kevin Davidson all walked away with just as much pie on their face as there was left in the plate. In the adult category, Paul McCoubrey was again astounded everyone with his ability to eat an entire pie at one sitting—with his hands behind his back, no less.

After the pie contest, things at the stage got a bit

Katelyn and Daniel Grant of Oshawa, below, were just two of the hundreds of people who enjoyed this popular community event.

Haliburton Lake's Sunday Regatta had them rolling in the beaches, and on the lawn and in the water. Events such as water balloon toss and shoe kick kept some people entertained, while others took to the beach for such traditional activities as burying friends and building sand castles.

PEOPLE

Good times end with impaired driving

by LORRAYNE ANTHONY

Staff Reporter

GREG IS A UNIVERSITY STUDENT. He works hard, gets good marks and plays on a varsity team. When you ask him if he's responsible, he smiles shyly.

Sure he has the occasional beer, but he drinks socially. "When we are all out having a good time, I might have a few beer. Everyone does. But none of us get out and out drunk," says Greg.

But when asked about drinking and driving, Greg knows people who still do it. "When we are all sober, we say we'd never do it. But after a couple of drinks, you think you can drive."

Keith is a recent high school graduate. Although he is eighteen, under the legal drinking age, he and some of his friends drink. But Keith is quick to say that if he and his friends have been drinking, they don't drive.

"When we drink, it's usually when we are camping or staying at someone's house. We won't go out to a bar and then drive home," says Keith.

Greg and Keith are real people, but their names have been changed. While both these young men were willing to give their impressions of drinking and driving, they didn't want to be identified. They did not want to get anyone in trouble.

Drinking and driving continues to be a huge problem, despite millions of advertising dollars spent warning Canadians of its follies. Why do people insist on driving after they've been drinking?

Advertising doesn't work according to Keith. "The only thing that influences kids are other kids. If your friends are doing it, then you'll probably end up doing it. I don't think anybody listens to the ads on TV."

However, OPP Constable Mike Maybee thinks the ads do work. "During traditional drinking times — Christmas and New Year's Eve — we have less impaired drivers. I believe we can thank the ads for that. People know we'll be out looking for them."

Constable Maybee also says, "The weekends, that's when we get our impaired drivers. Many people come up to Haliburton on the weekends. It's vacation time, so of course they are going to drink."

Last year from January to July, 58 people were charged with impaired driving. This year, up to July 31, 59 people were charged. There has not been a decrease in the number of impaired drivers. Why?

Frank Valle, a part-time bartender at McKeck's tavern on Highland Street Haliburton, has an answer. He believes fewer people are driving drunk and the police are doing a better job of catching those that do.

"There's no doubt in my mind the police are more efficient at catching impaired drivers. I've been up

"This summer I heard a waitress say, 'I'll bring you another beer as soon as you give me your keys.' I don't know if you would have heard that five, ten years ago," says bartender Frank Valle.

here since June and I've been stopped for four spot checks. I've been coming up here for 17 years and I've never been stopped before this summer," says Mr. Valle.

He feels the police are better at reading people these days. "They have a good idea what they are looking for. They might just ask to see your license, and they'll be able to tell just from the way you handle yourself. They aren't going to give everybody a breathalyzer."

Bartenders have a unique perspective on Canada's drinking scene. Since they are sober, when everyone else in a drinking establishment may not be, they see things clearly. Mr. Valle believes bartenders are more aware of a customers' level of intoxication now than they were five years ago.

"This summer, for the first time, I heard a waitress say 'I'll bring you another beer as soon as you give me your keys.' I don't know if you would have heard that five, ten years ago," says Mr. Valle.

Even though he believes the situation is getting better, Mr. Valle believes drinking and driving is a real problem in Haliburton. "Up here you have a good chance of not getting caught whereas in the city it's easier to get nailed for drinking and driving."

Greg also notices a difference between Haliburton and campus drinking. "At university, if you have a couple of drinks you can walk home. Here in Haliburton you can't just walk home from a bar — and who has the money to take a cab?"

"Nobody takes cabs," says Keith. "Who wants to pay 50 bucks to get home when you can drive and not get caught?"

Unlike Mr. Valle, Keith doesn't think the police are doing a good enough job of charging drunk drivers. Keith believes that in a small community like Haliburton, people get to know people. As a result friends won't charge friends. "The police aren't doing a good job. Countless numbers of people are driving wasted and getting away with it."

Keith also sees another problem: under-age drinking and driving. He believes school dances pose biggest problems.

"A lot of people go to somebody's house and get wasted, and then drive to the dance. I'd say about a quarter of the kids at dances are wasted. The worst thing is a lot of the teachers are friends with the kids, so the teachers turn a blind eye," says Keith.

Kit Pizzezy, head of the Physical and Health Education department at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, agrees that drinking under age is a problem. From discussions in health classes, she has discovered that kids today don't feel a party is a party without drinking.

"I don't understand why kids — or anyone — drink to excess. It is expensive. It is not healthy. I think we've got to realize there are other ways to have a good time."

While the anti-drinking-and-driving advertising has educated students somewhat, Mrs. Pizzezy thinks most kids think of themselves as invincible and immortal. "I think kids are aware of the dangers but they have the attitude 'Well it won't happen to me'."

Mr. Valle doesn't see under-age drinking as a problem. "If you're a responsible server, you'll ask for ID. And if a person has had too much to drink, you'll stop serving him and make sure he gets home safely."

For that reason Mr. Valle thinks bartending in a small community is much better than serving in Toronto. "You get to know the people here and you know who is driving and who isn't."

To Mr. Valle, drinking responsibly begins at home. "It is up to parents to teach children how to use alcohol with responsibility."

Others don't think so. Sheila (not her real name) says her parents were very good about setting a responsible drinking example, but that didn't stop her from drinking and driving.

"Sometimes I couldn't even remember how I got home — but the car would be in the driveway and the keys would be in my purse. I drove home when I was too drunk to remember where I was or who I was with."

It didn't matter how many commercials she saw, Sheila thought she could live dangerously forever. "Thank God I wasn't killed. Thank God I didn't kill someone else! One day I just realized how stupid I was. I think you have to grow up and decide never to drive if you've had a drink. It is that simple."

Sheila looks down and says, "I shudder when I think about how lucky I was. I could never drink and drive now."

Canning Lake picnic capers:
Enthusiasts enjoy the annual event

Fun got out of the can at this year's Canning Lake Picnic. Adults and kids alike got in on the act with a variety of contests demanding skill, coordination and a heavy dose of silliness. Some of the younger folks took the time to share a cool drink and a chat about the adults' antics.

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Thursday afternoon was birthday tea party. The ladies and gentlemen of the Kennis Lake Cottage Owners Association served the Residents. Besides the delicious sandwiches, they brought cup cakes instead of the usual birthday cake.
On behalf of the Residents I would like to thank all who helped with the tea: Murray and Yolanda Wenger, Earla Hume and granddaughter Katie Muir and Jim Wilkinson.
Happy Hour was entertained by Bill Payne, George Smith, Eldon Deaco, Don Burch, Charlie Hadley and Doris. The Residents of Happy Hour thank you all very much for your entertainment. They sang also. We also thank the volunteers who served: Don and Eldon Holden, Mary Guillemine, Dorothy Milne and Jankie Thomas.
Saturday, July 28, some Residents went to Stanhope's Fun Day.

Sunday Chapel was taken by Rev. John Burgess and as usual it was very instructive. Alice Jones was organist for the service and we sincerely thank them both.
Last week we welcomed another Resident, Mrs. Irene Stamp. I believe she will be here during a vacation period.
Monday afternoon the Minden Line Dancers were here again to teach us. It was so warm only a few of us tried it. Dorothy Milne teaches the dancing and Ellen Holden, Molly McCarthy, Adele McGoldrich and Dorothy Rowe came to dance. We also had a clown dancer Lee Oster. The Residents thank you ladies and gentleman for coming (especially on so warm a day) sincerely.
Dorothy Hunter and Frank Le Maitre showed movies: "Spring Time in Holland" and "Squirrel on my Shoulder". We enjoyed them very much.
Tuesday morning the chapel service was conducted by Father Felix whom we thank sincerely. In the afternoon Doris took a busload of Residents for a trip to the tower at Dorset. We were happy to have Ruth Griffin with us today and having the nursing staff help the way they did with loading the bus. Everything ran so smoothly. We thank them sincerely. We also want to thank Muriel Harrington very much for her gift of a pan of home-made fudge. Everyone enjoyed it. It was a lovely day for a drive. Of course we couldn't pass Kawartha Dairy and we were home on schedule.
Dianna Morris was to read to us tonight; she phoned to say she was unable to do so.
Grace Coburn has returned after a week's visit with her daughter Caroline.

Tough decisions for Gooderham judges

more serious as people took part in the talent contest, providing much entertainment for the spectators. When it was over, Tricia-Lynn Miners was awarded top honour for contestants under 10, while Troy Main earned top spot for those over 16.
Beauty is in the eye of the beholder, and all contestants in the beauty contest gave the judges a hard time as they tried to choose the winners. In the Junior category, Sarah Traviss was the winner, while Susan Brindle took that honour in the Senior category.
Earlier in the day, the team of Gary Lynas and Jim Davidson paddled their way under the bridge first to win the canoe race. Coming in second was the duo of Dennis and Martin Lynas.
On Sunday, the popular demolition derby attracted hundreds of spectators. The Best Looking Car was awarded to Kirk MacDuff. Winners in the events are as follows: Heat 1, Kirk MacDuff; Heat 2, Bill Peels; Heat 3, Jeff Hunter; Heat 4, Steve Woodward; Feature heat winner, earning the $500 prize, was Jeff Hunter with Tim Hunter banging in second to win $200; Powder Puff winners were Michelle Parish and Jackie Traviss; in the Free-for-all, Kirk MacDuff was winner of Heat 1 and Ken Madill won Heat 2. The Glamorgan Firefighters' raffle for the demo car was won by Wallace Wood of Haliburton.

In between heats, things really heated up with the tug-of-war. The winning men's team was Highland Creek, who dug in and put their shoulders to the rope to earn the honour. Among the women's teams, the Gooderham Ladies emerged from the dust victorious.
For those who preferred gentler summer persuasions, the horseshoe tournament attracted 59 competitors. When all the shoes were tossed and the sand in the pit brushed away, the team of Roy James and Bernie Oliskie were crowned the winners. In the singles competition, Roy James proved his toss could not be matched.

NOTICE OF THE PASSING OF A ZONING BY-LAW
THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF LUTTERWORTH

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Township of Lutterworth passed By-law No. 28-90 on the 19th day of July, 1990, under Section of the Planning Act, S.O. 1983.
AND TAKE NOTICE that any person or agency may appeal to the Ontario Municipal Board in respect to the By-law by filing with the Clerk of the Corporation of the Township of Lutterworth not later than the 10th day of August, 1990, a notice of appeal setting out the objection to the By-law and the reasons in support of the objection.

LOCATION OF LANDS AFFECTED
The lands in question are located along the Gull River in Concessions XIII and XIV, Lots 3 through 7, in the Township of Lutterworth. The lands are graphically illustrated on the Location Map below.
PURPOSE OF AMENDMENT
The proposed amendment serves to make changes to the Zone Map to add an Environmental Protection (EP) Zone to correspond to the area along the River subject to severe flooding (floodway) and a flood fringe symbol is added to existing zone symbols for lands located in the less severely flooded areas. The by-law adds corresponding regulations to control construction within the areas subject to potential flooding.
DATED at the Township of Lutterworth this 30th day of July, 1990.

Haliburtonians HAVE heart, give $800 for Gambian children

by MICHAEL McHUGH
Staff Reporter

Although the skies threatened rain all day, native Haliburtonians and tourists alike showed up at the Head Lake Park bandshell last Sunday night to listen to music and donate $817 for the children of The Gambia.

Sponsored by Help A Village Effort, the concert featured singer/songwriter Jack Lenz, famous for his "O.K. Blue Jays!" theme song, along with music for the CBC's The Journal and Middy.

Lenz, a member of the Baha'i faith, urged the audience to strive for peace and to be sensitive to the plight of others around the world.

"You just have to travel and see people who live not as we live, and who have not what we have," Lenz told the audience between songs.

The peaceful sounds of his solo electric piano performance, combined with the lake-side setting and the fading evening light, made for a very inspirational concert.

Most of Lenz's songs were dedicated to children who have suffered incredible hardships and injustices throughout the world.

One song, "Why were we meant to be" was written in honor of a little girl named Carly, who spent the first 8 to 10 months of her life battling serious leukemia. Although Lenz assured the crowd she was doing alright, he asked the crowd "why we have to sometimes go through things like that."

Another song entitled "Mona With Her Children", written by Doug Cameron, tells of a 16-year-old Baha'i Iranian girl who was martyred in 1983 because she stood firm against her oppressors, as the lyrics illustrate:

"You can't break my heart
You can't take my faith away"

Lenz also had a timely message for Iraq, which has recently invaded Kuwait.

"Why not try peace for awhile" was a song inspired by a man who, in 1911-12, travelled around the globe asking this important question.

"We have learned how to fight very well," said Lenz after the song, adding, "Saddam Hussein, are you listening?" Hussein is Iraq's president.

Lenz, who does many benefit concerts around the world, came to Haliburton at the insistence of Len and Lynn Duncombe, members of the Baha'i community here.

Last April 22, Lenz along with young people's entertainer Raffi and a children's choir from Toronto, played to a full house at the United Nations in honor of its Earth Day. At a particular point in the program, Lenz said, Soviet cosmonauts addressed the General Assembly from a space station orbiting the earth, encouraging peace.

HAVE began in Haliburton in 1983, and its mandate is to help the "poorest of the poor" in the third world. To date, this grass-roots group has drilled 85 wells in India as well as in Nicaragua.

After a trip to India in 1983, retired school teacher Gerry Feltham was appalled at the poverty in the rural area, explains Len Duncombe.

The absence of potable water in the village meant a two-to-three hour trek to the nearest well. Feltham realized one well in the village could save thousands of hours a year, time which could be spent raising the standard of living in the community.

FOR THE CHILDREN: These children are lucky. In some countries they are unable to laugh and dance. Musician Jay Lenz performs at the Head Lake bandshell last Sunday.

"Water-based projects have always been our main goal," said Duncombe, adding that at least one HAVE member—who pays his or her own way—accompanies any project overseas to ensure the donated money is well spent.

Money received from Sunday's concert, Duncombe said, was to go directly for education projects for the children of the Gambia.

"Twenty per cent of children die before the age of five," said Clarence McInerney, a member of

HAVE who recently spent time in The Gambia, and who familiarized the crowd of over 100 to the reasons for the show.

McInerney blames the high rate of illiteracy for much of the country's ills, including the high mortality rate. Unable to read labels for medicine, many Gambians can't help themselves when they are sick or their children are sick.

"If they could teach these poor fellows how to read, they'd be better off."

SECTION 3

Globe-trotting journalists:

Jennifer Hunter and John Cruikshank have learned that the couple who writes together is right together

by SALLY RITCHIE
Staff Reporter

FOR MANY PEOPLE, cottage mornings are incomplete without a cup of coffee and leisurely read through the paper. But when Jennifer Hunter and her husband John Cruikshank pick up the Globe and Mail to peruse at their Lake Kashagawigamog cottage, they are bringing the office to their home away from home.

When Ms Hunter reads the Globe, and many other papers, she can see some results of her first year's teaching at Toronto's Ryerson Polytechnical Institute: many of her journalism students work as reporters now. She can also see her husband's work, since Mr. Cruikshank is the paper's Associate Editor. Until last fall, Ms Hunter was herself a Globe business writer.

This couple is interesting for a variety of reasons, not the least of which is their survival of a shared profession. Not only are they both journalists, but until Ms Hunter's move to Ryerson, they worked for the same newspapers throughout their careers.

They met in 1977 at the Kingston Whig Standard, where both were reporters—Mr. Cruikshank on arts, Ms Hunter on the city desk.

Several years later, the couple moved on to the Montreal Gazette. Then in 1981, both took jobs at the Globe; in 1985, they moved to the paper's Vancouver bureau. In 1988, they were back in Toronto.

'You're much more understanding of your spouse than a co-worker,' she says of their ability to work together.

Many people may find the idea of working with a spouse somewhat unappealing. Ms Hunter says although it was difficult in the beginning, they grew accustomed to it. "It changed," she says. "Our experience has been that you have to adjust."

Since they were sometimes working almost side-by-side, or on different floors of large newspapers, it is clear they had to be flexible. However, working together had its advantages. "You're much more understanding of your spouse than of a co-worker," Ms Hunter says. Her husband laughs, and blurts out "Maybe!" With a smile, she casually ignores him.

Unwittingly straightman is a role in which Ms Hunter seems perfectly comfortable. Asked when they were married, she replies, "May 5, 1979. I'll never forget." She asks her husband if he remembers. Without missing a beat, he nods his head gravely. "Uh huh. I was there." A what-can-you-do smile again crosses his wife's face. Flexibility in action.

Now that she is not working with him, Ms Hunter has discovered a weakness in her husband: he has no propensity for the sharing of personal information (aka gossip). Being away from the Globe meant "I had to rely on John for gossip, and he's the worst gossip in the world," she says with just a touch of irritation.

When friends updated her on events at the paper, she would ask her husband why he hadn't told her. "He'd swear up and down he'd told me, but he hadn't," she says. Mr. Cruikshank sits shaking his head at her statement, firm in his assertion that he had passed all information along.

The interview on the sun-drenched deck is occasionally punctuated by exclamations from the couple's two children. From the dock comes the laughter-filled shrieks of five-year-old Simone, who is thrilled with the warmth of the lake water and eager to demonstrate her newly-acquired swimming abilities. But one-and-a-half-year-old Noah is slightly disgruntled with his parents and is not being bashful about his feelings. Not having slept well the previous night, Noah is still unwilling to alleviate his grumpiness with a nap. His plaintive wails pierce the cottage walls.

Mother and father take turns attempting to calm Noah, and each display the worn-but-not-beaten resilience of patient parents. Ms Hunter's initial optimism—"All that child needs is his mother's

Not only are John Cruikshank and Jennifer Hunter both journalists, but until last fall they also worked together at the Globe and Mail. This isn't the only challenge they have faced, as the howls of son Noah and laughter of daughter Simone (both too busy to be shown) make perfectly clear. "We had more responsibilities in our career than we would have if we'd had kids when we were younger... There are no shortcuts."

lullaby"—changes as Noah demonstrates remarkable persistence. Through a weary smile, she repeatedly murmurs "Shut up Noah". However, this is only intended as a venting of frustration. With a facetious sigh, she says she is becoming a curmudgeon.

Even if this was true, it would probably be understandable given the pressures created by a hectic career and young children. But asked how they coped when both were employed full-time in a most demanding profession, and came home to face parenting's challenges, they are remarkably nonchalant.

Mr. Cruikshank seems a bit surprised at the question. "Most of the people we know raising kids are in demanding careers."

They waited a few years before having children (Ms Hunter is 38; her husband teases her that he is a younger man at 37.) Mr. Cruikshank says having children a few years later had its disadvantages. "We had more responsibilities in our careers than we would have if we'd had kids when we were younger." They have concluded that child-rearing is never easy. "There are no shortcuts," they agree.

Ms. Hunter says her desire for more time with her children was one reason behind her career change. Since her job involves a lot of paper-marking, which she can do at home, her work hours are fairly flexible.

"It's easier to spend more time with the kids," she says. "We had reached a point in our careers where we'd both established ourselves. We knew what we were doing."

She had always known she wanted to be a reporter. As a child, she fantasized about being Lois Lane. (When she told her journalism class about this, she was teased mercilessly, since she rather resembles her childhood heroine.)

Initially however, her husband did not know what he was doing in journalism. Now a senior member of the Globe's editorial team, he left the University of Toronto with an arts degree and no idea what he wanted to do. After working in a paper mill, he got a job at the Whig Standard which "seemed like an infinitely better opportunity."

He enjoys his job immensely, although the new look of the Globe has meant a lot more working weekends. "It's an enormous amount of work redesigning a newspaper," he says. Still, "I increasingly enjoy it."

The philosophical underpinnings of journalism interest him greatly. Society's relationship with the media fascinates him: "We have a kind of trust element in society. (Journalists are) a significant element in the system," he says, adding this keeps the profession vibrant, open and honest.

But what is the downside? "Just the degree to not do that which we should." And this tends to be caused by failures of moral commitment and a lack of intellectual energy.

Asked to expand on this, he says journalistic shortcomings are often the result of narrow-mindedness: "the degree to which we close ourselves off to new ideas...to become unconsciously a bulwark of the status quo." All these are integral to a journalist's role, which he says is largely the care and tending of the public forum. "It's not a matter of being con-

'It's not a matter of being conservative or liberal. It's rather a matter of living up to the responsibility you have as a journalist... We have a special place in society.'

servative or liberal. It's rather a matter of living up to the responsibility you have as a journalist."

At this point, Ms Hunter emerges after a Noah-session. Hearing the conversation, she teases her husband for being "full of hot air." She then starts talking about the profession in an equally enthusiastic manner.

"We have a special place in society," she says, adding that journalists are allowed access to places and interviews denied to the average citizen. But this does carry with it responsibility, one which is not always fulfilled. "We don't always do a good job. We get caught up in our own little thing," she says. Reporters can become so wrapped up in their own beat that "We forget about the readers and get caught up in ourselves."

They agree that when a journalist gets too close to a subject, judgement is impaired. Mr. Cruikshank adds, "There is very little critical going on about journalism." Again, his wife agrees, but says, "Part of the reason is that there isn't the luxury of time to sit back and look at how things could be better."

Despite its failings, both love the profession. "I've been doing this for 15 years now and you never stop learning. That's the wonderful thing about this career," Ms Hunter says.

She has found teaching to be another learning experience. "I learned to analyze stories in a way I never did before," she says about marking her students' efforts. "I became an editor without even realizing it." Previously, she had always felt writing was instinctual. "Now I know it's a learned craft."

Her students surprised her, particularly the students in the program for university graduates. Many were older than the average university student; most had worked for a number of years and some had had previous careers. "I was dealing with 30 different egos and I learned I had to treat them all differently."

She grew very close to her students, so much so that they are still turning to her for advice. "I've been getting little panicked phone calls all summer," she says. But this has been a pleasure, not a trial. "I felt very fond of all my students. I'm not sure I'll feel that way about another class."

Still, she misses writing. She has done some freelance writing this summer, and she thinks eventually she would like to do it again full-time. But she doesn't know for sure what path her career will take. "I've learned one doesn't predict," she says, and one recalls the flexibility the work lives of this couple have always demanded. "You just have to take what comes."

For the moment, John Cruikshank and Jennifer Hunter intend only to enjoy the "peace" offered by the Highlands. Somewhat wistfully, they recall the days when the family cottage was a sanctuary from the tiresome pressures of city life. Now, though, "We do a lot of care and tending of children."

Noah again calls for some attention. As his father heads into the cottage, his mother smiles beleagueredly.

"Journalism hasn't taught us how to put our child to sleep."

COMMUNITY NEWS

Decoration Day is revived

COBOCONK NEWS

by: SHEILA LAKE

On Sunday, July 22, there was a Decoration Day service held at the Coboconk cemetery. This used to be an annual event, when Bertha Caton and Harriett Mullyard were alive and worked hard for all local community events. Then it fell by the wayside. Now that this event is revived, let's hope it will be a yearly event.

The guest speaker for this event was Rev. Arthur Bartlett of Lindsay. The call to worship was by Rev. David Campbell of Faith Tabernacle, who also had the prayer of Invocation. Rev. Pat Walsh of Trinity Full Gospel Church read a portion of scripture after the Invocation. The Happy Wanderers Choral Group sang a couple of songs, following prayer. The speaker Rev. Arthur Bartlett, gave a message on meditation, remembering the loved ones resting at the cemetery and those who gave their lives in two world wars.

Sunday, July 22 also saw a team of Belgian horses drawing a wagon, with passengers aboard, and with Jennie Colgouh on board giving a commentary on older buildings and points of interest on the route. The wagon went up North Water Street and around Albert Street. The oldest house in town, built in the mid-1700s, is the home owned by Mildred Faulkner. The only changes over the years was the addition of a summer kitchen at the back, a front veranda and the boards have been covered over with aluminum siding all around the outside. Mildred is the third generation to live in the house.

The old Patti House Hotel is a point of interest, built in the year of 1853. Anyone who drives through Coboconk on their way north is familiar with the old Patti House on Main Street.

Ye Olde Jailhouse is a quaint little building, built in the 1890's on a 18x20 ft.

property. Some of the oldsters in town can remember when the Police Chief locked up so and so, overnight because they had too much to drink (either from a foreto mentioned Pattie House hotel or one of the several boot-leggers). It's not that many years ago that Bootleggers in the area were well known by those who required — or thought they required, their product. So when a person was "bad" they were locked up over night in the local jail. All this before drugs, guns, knives and other acts of violence came upon the scene.

The building is now used and maintained by the Coboconk New Horizons Seniors who sell their beautiful crafts from the building.

If you had a ticket on the one thousand dollar bill at the Norland horse pull, don't be too disappointed you haven't got it because the lucky guy was one Steve Ashmore of Bobcaygeon. See — you and I never win!

The Coboconk Festival weekend was a great success thanks to many who worked so hard to put it all together! People filled the streets and park area and weather was perfect.

The weekend began on Saturday morning with a pancake breakfast at the Anglican Church and the local restaurants. There was a Pie eating contest, kite contest, bike rodeo contest, mutt (dog) show, canoe race and canoe tipping, square dancing in the Community Hall, a magic show, a barbecue, flea market, bake sales, etc. All in all, no matter what your interest — it was here to enjoy. A very good time was had by all.

Congratulations to our neighbour, Shawn Angiers, who will be off to Waterloo to University there, where he will study for a degree in Geological engineering. Shawn is the son of Debbie Angiers and was on the Honour Roll at Fenelon High School this year. Best wishes, Shawn!

I'm sorry to hear that Dora Lilley has passed away. She was a cook at the Coby Riverside restaurant many years ago and a very hard worker. Sincere sympathy to her family. I was surprised to meet our daughter-in-law, Marilyn, enter in to the same restaurant as I on Thursday. Recently, our son-in-law and his 10-year-old son, Christopher, were fishing at the Government Dock on South Water Street. They saw a young duckling with a fish lure hooked in its neck. Clint managed to get a net over the duck, but it escaped the net before he could put his hands on the duck.

Drop-in sale is a big success

HOME SUPPORT NEWS

by: NORMA PARNELL

Educational workshops are planned for August 8 and September 5 to train and update the Board of Directors. As knowledge makes the position much easier and more interesting it is hoped all Board Members will attend.

The Drop-In Centre held a very rewarding yard sale June 30. To all those fine folks who donated articles to sell along with the many volunteers who worked hard all day, our grateful thanks. You made the sale a great success.

Visitors and residents alike are invited to join in any of the many activities

Two local men and their wives and family have been visiting their many relatives here. Rev. Peter Barbour, wife Helene and Children of Alymer have been visiting the Barbour Clan while Rev. Larry Moore, wife Sandy and children of Saskatoon, Sask. have been visiting his mother, Betty Moore, sister Anne Marie and all the Moore relatives.

Mrs. Lena Baker of Toronto has been visiting her sister, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Godwin at Burnt River, also Alan and Marion Lee.

Many friends of Vina and Weldon Neal of Victoria Road, joined in the celebration of their many years of community service at a party held in their honour at Victoria Road on Sun. July 22nd.

Twelve Mile Lake Church celebrates 100th birthday

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANNE MCKAY

What a wonderful day Sunday was. In spite of the weather people came from many parts of the county and further afield to celebrate the 100-year anniversary of Twelve Mile Lake Church.

Almost all of our congregation had family home: Ron Russell from Baltimore. Roger and Barbara Harrison from Port Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Allcorn, their daughter Mary and her family of Toronto, Bill and Alice chambers had their daughter Alison and family from Montreal, Fred

Rev. Ed Moll dedicated plaque to mark day.

Gregory of Ottawa, Mark Fennell and family of Toronto were some of the people who came to help celebrate. The Service was held in the C.E. building because of the weather which did not dampen the enthusiasm of the singing and visiting clergy who took part in the service followed by a homily on memories given by Rev. Grant MacDonald of Kitchener and a summer resident of Haliburton. The Rev. Ed Moll dedicated the plaque at the Lakeside. The rain stayed off long enough for a look inside the church and to read the history compiled by the Chambers Family.

Mrs. Beth Rivers of Markham spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Stan Archer. The wedding took place on Friday afternoon of Tom Harrison and Sharron Brankley at Zion United Church. Congratulations from the community. They will reside in Toronto.

We send sympathy to the family of the late Holly Cooper who died suddenly last week. Holly taught a lot of our young people in Typing class before her retirement from H.C.H.S.

The Annual Blue Grass Festival is this weekend. The Legion has a great program lined up. I hope to meet some of you there.

Monte Carlo at Kirkfield

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS

by: MILLIE MOSS

Joan and Harold Mills of Whitby will be spending a few days at the home of Win and Bill Wilson, RR1, Kinmount.

Phyllis, Ernie Joe and Steve McHale were part of a number of people who enjoyed the weekend at Palmer Rapids for the Blue Grass/Country Music.

Bob Marsh of RR1, Kinmount, stopped by for a visit telling us of his trip to the midwest States where he was bike racing. Glad to see you safely home Bob.

August 11 is the Kinmount Hall board Salad Supper, 4:30 p.m. - 7:00 p.m. at the Kinmount Community Hall.

Monte Carlo night at the Kirkfield Festival, Saturday is September 1, 1990 at 8:30 p.m. to be held at the Community Complex. For ticket information call 438-3391 or 438-3555. It is sponsored by that great group, the Kirkfield District Lions Club.

If you should have a short haired, small type puppie, preferably male, available around August 16-17 you could consider a call to Bev. Graham at 454-3707.

Remember, September is Big Brother/Big Sister month and they will have a face painting booth at the Kinmount Fair on September 1. These people do a great job and need volunteers. If you have any spare time to be a big brother or sister to little brothers/sisters it will be time well spent. If interested you can get more information by calling the office at 324-6800.

Happy birthday to Paul Kelly August 19.

Belated best wishes on a fifty-third wedding anniversary to two great couples: Eunice and George Ash and Alma and George Glass. These two sisters married the two Georges on the same day, June 20, 1937 and are still going strong. Many more to you!

Mrs. Emily Graham of Lindsay spent a few days recently, with her daughter Helen Byne of Kinmount.

Short column this week because to put it bluntly I feel rotten. Hope you're feeling better by now too

Band celebrates

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Alice and Leon Jones had their whole family home this past week: Shelley and Dean Minto, with daughter, Heather and son James from Scenectady, N.Y.; Bev and Doug Moss from Orillia with daughter Meghann, and Lisa from Toronto. Lisa's fiance, Darrell of Welland was also able to visit at this time.

A shower was held at the Centre on Sunday afternoon for Lisa Sisson, daughter of Russell and Doreen. Lots of Sisson ladies and young friends of the bride to be were in attendance.

On Saturday night at the Arena in Haliburton a shower was held for Claudia Kraus and Terry Hobden, son of Harry and Vera Hobden. The couple will be married at St. George's Anglican Church

Helen Graham.

Stay well and happy and give me a call at 454-2395 with your news.

A late note: someone else is looking for a small, short haired dog, female. If you have one looking for a good home give Gill Graham a call at 454-3816.

on Sept. 8 at 4 p.m.

Congratulations to Lloyd and Gladys Campbell who celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary on Saturday evening at the Centre.

All four of our children and our two daughters-in-law spent the weekend with us. The Haliburton Legion Pipe Band, Branch 129, celebrated twenty years of activity since the first charter lessons were given by Earl at the Legion. Many former band members and families gathered in Glebe Park for fun and informal greetings. The drummers and the pipers opposed each other noisily and with high good humour over a game of T-ball. Even the youngest participants did their best as they struck and ran. Derek Ford was umpire.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Lions do another good deed for community

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

There were many July birthdays which we will remember belatedly: Alicia Beuden and Becky Scott the 7th, Lindsay Drinkwater was 1 year old on the 13th, we give her a hug and a kiss, Scott Crewson on the 15th, Marg Carson and Colin Macdonald on the 21st, Peggy Walker on the 24th and Kristy Clift on the 27th, Ron Howard on Aug. 1st, Art Walkden on Aug. 3rd. We wish them all happiness for the future.

The Lions Bingo is still going strong every Thursday and Monday night at 8 p.m. in the Dorset Community Centre. The Lions would like to thank everyone who helped to make their yard sale on June 30th a success. A Special thanks to John Bacher for the assistance in bringing the trailer to the site. The Dorset Lions do many good deeds in the community and deserve to be supported. This year they are working toward raising enough funds to help purchase the "Jaws of Life" for the local volunteer fire department. They hope to have a sizable sum to donate towards this cause.

A lovely bridal shower was held in honour of Linda Clark in the Dorset Community Centre on July 12th. The shower was well attended and the bride to be received many lovely gifts. Linda and Randy Keown are to be married on Saturday, Sept. 22nd at Knox United Church, Dorset.

We have a lovely new baby boy in the family. On June 23rd Karen and David McKey became the proud parents of Devon Garrett, who weighed 7 lb. 12 oz. A brother for 3-year-old Brianna and grandson for Joyce. Congratulations for all.

If I had to have a prolonged illness I was fortunate to be living in such a caring community. I am very thankful to me friends, neighbors and relatives for their thoughtfulness and many acts of kindness during my recent bout of shingles. I was certainly well nourished and cared for, so thanks everyone.

H.H. Aleo Vera plants have many uses for palliative treatment for burns, insect bites, etc. The secretion that is within the fronds or leaves is very beneficial when used to relieve the itch and burning sensation that goes with shingles.

In the evening in more formal dress everyone related to or connected with the band gathered at the Legion for a super chicken dinner and dance. The Highlands Country Band provided their unique and enjoyable entertainment. Again as many as possible of former band members came for the special occasion. The present band and the former band played together. The present band played alone; the former band played alone. Pipe major and drum major remained constant for both old and new!

The Andy Sisson reunion took place on the weekend at Pine Lake, around Ron and Erma Sisson's and Frish Gibbon's places. Some of those in attendance were: Byron and Sylvia Sisson of Elliot Lake, Kelley and Blaine Rousy of Toronto, Brenda and Steve Cowie of Burlington, Linda and Andy Chic with daughter, Skye of Sault Ste. Marie, Carla, Doug and Dylan Brice of Hamilton, and Sandy McTavish, chum of Bern Sisson of BAF/RCAF.

Some of the friends who came to St. Andrew's to the reception for Sophy and Alan Cooper to congratulate them and meet Sophy's parents, Derek and Margaret Ford were: Bill Gliddon, Jock and Bette Mavor, Marg Packard, Iris Taylor, Pierce and Doreen Whitney, the Wayne Fawcetts, Blanche Linton, Alice Jones, Marilyn Gibbon, Lesma Sisson, Valerie and Ernie Chambley, Darlene and Cathlyne Osborne, Ruth Lewis, the Perry Morrisons and of course all of our own family. Thanks one and all for helping us celebrate this happy time in the lives of this special couple.
